TODAY'S FILM FEATURES. Columbia—Gloria Swanson in "The Impossibile Mrs. Bellew." Liberty—Milton Sills in "Skin Deep." Majestic—Clara Kimball Young in "Straight From Paris." Rivoli—Bessie Love in "For-get-Me-Not." Blue Mouse—George Arliss in "The Man Who Played God." Hippodrome—Doria May in "The Understudy." Circle—"Up in the Air About Mary."

STORY of mother love, beautifully developed, is said to be "The Impossibile Mrs. Bellew," a new Gloria Swanson Paramount picture, which will be the feature at the Columbia theater, beginning today. "The Impossibile Mrs. Bellew" is the story of a wealthy young mother's love for her little son and her reactions when the child is torn from her by the decree of a divorce court after an evil light has been cast upon her really innocent part in a murder committed by her husband...

Blue Mouse Theater. George Arliss in "The Man Who Played God" is the current feature attraction at the Blue Mouse theater. This photodrama is founded on the story by Goussier Morris. Despite the fact that it is strongly reminiscent of Charles Rand Kennedy's play, "The Servant in the Room," it is nevertheless a decidedly good feature. Mr. Arliss is cast in the role of a tremendously successful American pianist who divides the continent by his concert. He wins the girl of his choice...

equal basis with other countries. "On the committee of which I am member (the farm bloc), we are working on a farm credit bill which will be for the purpose of extending credit to the farmers and to give them cheaper money. It will be somewhat along the lines of the war finance board. This bill may be made a branch of the federal farm loan board and yet in my opinion it will be a bigger thing than that."

choice. Just before returning to America he is invited to give a special recital for some of the royalty. An attempt is made upon the life of his majesty by some bomb-throwers. The only damage done, other than to some windows, by the explosion is to the hearing of the American pianist. He becomes deaf. Returning home he becomes embittered. Life without his music is empty. His old family servant of many years standing tries to steady him to encourage him, to comfort him. To mitigate his isolation he becomes an expert at lip reading. With the aid of powerful glasses he studies the people in the public park opposite his home, noting their conversation by the movement of their lips. Just as he is at the point of suicide the tragedy of a young couple revealed to him by their lips through his glasses helps him. He sends his old servant out to them with the note that he will care for them. They insist upon knowing the name of their benefactor. The old servant, acting upon his master's instructions, will not divulge his name, merely saying "It is a man who for a moment played God." That changes the life and plans of the embittered musician. He continues in that role, dispensing good. But through the same glasses and in the same park he sees his wife, who has just returned to town, and her lover. Their secret is revealed. He is willing to give her up, as he is supposed to be but "a shell of his former self." But the wife loves him despite his affliction and his inability to speak. Subsequently, through another accident and a shock, his hearing is restored.

Screen Gossip. Milton Sills and Jack Muhlhall, in "The Forgotten Law," open at the Majestic theater Saturday. This is an adaptation of Caroline Abbott Stanley's novel, "A Modern Madonna."

Shirley Mason, in "Youth Must Have Love," is booked as the next picture attraction at the Hippodrome.

James Kirkwood, a star himself, vies with the villains de luxe of screenland, John Davidson and Stuart Holmes, in proving out for the remarkable characterization of Priscilla Dean as Cigarette in "Under Two Flags," the Universal-Jewel version of Ouida's great story which begins its engagement at the Rivoli theater Saturday.

Most business problems are sales problems

Production presents real problems from time to time. But a vast majority of business problems today are sales problems.

Invention, standardization, power development, machinery, have made most production problems matters of routine solution.

No matter what kind of business you are in, your biggest problem is the sale of your wares.

Good printing will help you sell your goods. You may doubt that fact, you may ignore it, but unless you are going to use the printing press to help your sales, you might as well drop out now.

The printing press produces selling impulses at the lowest price at which selling impulses can be produced.

You need these selling impulses. Don't try to do without them.

Most business problems today are sales problems.
