OLD STATE RIGHTS FAST DISAPPEARING

Power of Federal Government Is Growing Daily.

Opposition to President's Suggestion Causes Surprise; Maine Protest Is Recalled.

BY MARK SULLIVAN. (Copyright by New York Evening Post inc. Published by Arrangement.) WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 22. The opposition in congress to President Harding's suggestion tha should be subject to the federal in the direction of invasion of state rights than any of the many steps that have been taken in a century of aggressive crowding on the part right of a state to borrow money on such terms as it pleases, and to and interest of these borrowings on its own terms is about as fundamental as anything could be.

The friends of state rights think that if this goes there isn't much left, and we might as well wipe out the whole idea of state boundaries and individual state identity.

At the same time, the opponents recognize the reasons which gave rise to the proposal and admit it is a situation demanding cure. Rich men and large investors buy the bonds of states because the income from them is exempt from taxation. The unhappy results are that the federal government loses the revenue and that funds which under ordinary circumstances might be inan inordinate rate of interest in order to attract the investor's money. From this a considerable number of dubious results follow. There is a great incentive for the states to issue more bonds and still more issue more bonds and still more bonds. They are tempted to go into all sorts of enterprises, such as road-building, the erection of expansive public buildings and the like. From this it results that in addition to the diverting of money there is also a diverting of inbor, which is embarrassing to ordinary business.

Neither did any official come for any of the mysterious movings behind to he was published either Monday or Tuesday. All the lines of world diplomacy to which allusion has been repeatedly made in official outgivings, both in the diverting of money there is also a diverting of inbor, which is embarrassing to ordinary business.

Surtaxes Here to Stay.

Of course there is another way of meeting the situation. That would be to reduce the high surtaxes and so take away the condition which BELGIUM ASKS MAN FOR leads the large investor to prefer state bonds. But any motion look ing toward a reduction of highe surfaxes is so aggressively opposed Holland, Spain and Greece Also that it is almost helplesa.

Among public men there is as steadily growing disposition to feel that too much is being done at Washington, and too little at the washington, and too littles at the various state captions, that the federal government has already taken of the control of the common of the rights of the democratic party, namely, jealou to handle efficiently, and that it is desirable to get back to what was once a fundamental doortrae of the common of the rights of the states against federal emocrachment in the amateur Athietic union and the states against federal emocrachment in the amateur Athietic union and the states against federal emocrachment in the federal government is following a control true, that in othey fields than this matter of tax exempt bonds, the federal government is following a control true, that in othey fields than the federal government is following a control true, that in othey fields than the federal government is following a control true, that in othey fields than the federal government is following a control true, that in othey fields the states to greater expenditures. As some men put it, congress is steadily beinging pressure on the states to give up more and more, of their functions.
