TRAIL BLAZERS BASKETBALL

Portland's Trail Blazers, after winning four straight at home last week, now need seven victories in their final 22 games to post the best expansion record in any National Basketball Association season in which two or more teams were admitted.

The Blazers, who since December 27 have won 10 and lost 11, will be in action just once this week - on Friday night in Memorial Coliseum against the Seattle SuperSonics with their controversial new star, Spencer Haywood.

The Trail Blazers now have won 21 games - six more than San Diego and five more than Phoenix in the expansion seasons of the Rockets and Suns.

Further, the Blazers' winning percentage is .350 - best of any expansion team since Chicago joined the league alone for the 1966-67 campaign. These are the final records of expansion clubs compared with the current record of the Blazers:

Season	Team	W	L	Pct.
1966-67	Chicago	33	48	.407
1970-71	Portland	21	39	.350
1968-69	Milwaukee	27	55	.329
1967-68	Seattle	23	59	.280
1968-69	Phoenix	16	66	.195
1967-68	San Diego	15	67	.183

Meanwhile, the Friday night visitors, the SuperSonics, are one of only six NBA teams the Blazers have not defeated this season. And the Friday night test will be the first of three chances for a Portland victory.

The Blazers also have three chances left against Philadelphia, two against Cincinnati (starting Tuesday night, February 16, in a doubleheader with the Harlem Globetrotters in Eugene) and one against Los Angeles and San Diego. Only Phoenix has locked up a series sweep after four straight victories.
