Black coach promoted

Tom Williams, former assistant to the head coach and community relations manager of the Houston Oilers, has been named the team's player personnel director.

A former assistant football coach and head track coach at Grambling (La.) College, Williams has reached the highest team position held by a black per-

Bend the Left Knee

Today's bowler has a finish that is too erect.

She probably threw the ball too far down the alley, which takes most of the action off the ball at once.

Thus, very few pins will be dropped at the release, bowlers should "get down" - bending the left knee so that the arc of the right hand is properly low.

A check point for good timing. Do you have good timing? Well if your sliding foot and the ball reach the foul line at the same time, the answer is "yes."

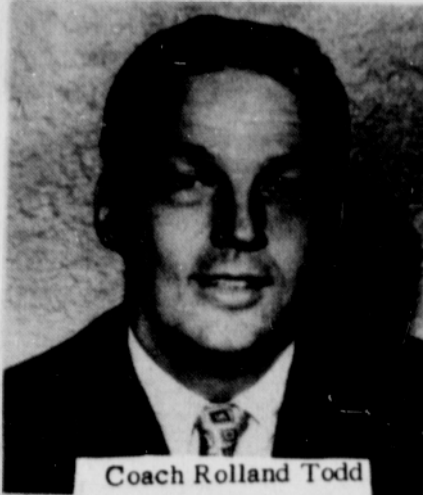

When this happens, you'll be aware of a smooth, coordinated feeling that makes bowling far more pleasure.

son in the National Football League.

The other black personnel director is Rommie Loudd, of the Boston Patriots.

Commenting on the promotion, the Arkansas Gazette sports editor, Orville Henry, wrote "In a year when 20 of the first 26 taken in the NFL draft are blacks, this (Williams's promotion) makes sense."

Portland trail blazer

Coach Rolland Todd

The Portland Trail Blazers will shoot for their sixth straight National Basketball Association victory on — night in — against the —. But you'll have to wait a few months to fill in the blanks. It's all over.

Geoffrey Petrie

It started, for Portland, with the first free throw by Jim Barnett and the Blazers' first field goal — a tip-in by Ron Knight — against Cleveland back on October 16 in Memorial Coliseum.

And it started with national magazines saying.....

"Don't worry, Portland will break all your first-year records for futility."

"This may be the worst group (of draft choices) ever taken....."

"Of the three new expansion teams, the team from Oregon seemed to come off with the shortest end of the straw in the draft....."

"On paper, this appears to be the weakest of the expansion franchises....."

That's what they were writing last summer.

The Trail Blazers, instead, posted the second-best expansion record of all time. The records:

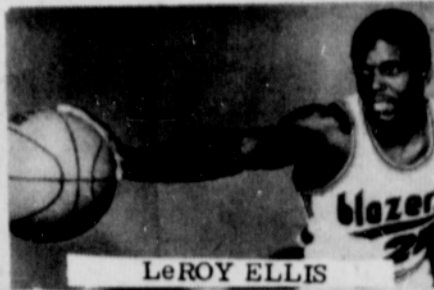

Chicago	1966-67	33	48	.407
Portland	1970-71	29	53	.354
Milwaukee	1968-69	27	55	.329
Seattle	1967-68	23	59	.280
Buffalo	1970-71	22	60	.268
Phoenix	1968-69	16	66	.268
San Diego	1967-68	15	67	.183
Cleveland	1970-71	15	67	.183
