Edmonds teaches UN class

The United Nations, its policies, problems, conflicts, roles and responsibilities will be the subject of a special Portland State University Summer Term course instructed by Dr. Helen Edmonds, former United States alternate delegate to the United Nations General Assembly. Dr. Edmonds is returning to PSU for her fifth consecutive summer.

The course, "Learning About the United Nations," runs August 7-18, Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. It offers three hours of graduate or undergraduate credit in history, education or political science.

gation on the Third Committee dealing with social, humanitarian and cultural problems. Dr. Edmonds, distinguished professor of history and former dean of the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences at North Carolina Central University, has been president of Links, a national Negro women's service organization.

Her teaching career spans nearly 40 years and includes lectures given throughout Europe and Africa. In 1956 Dr. Edmonds became the 1st Black woman to second the nomination of a presidential candidate, Dwight D. Eisenhower and, in 1957, she became his personal representative-at-large in Africa.

Currently, she is a member of the National Advisory Council on Women. Last year Dr. Edmonds was the guest of Israeli prime minister Golda Meir as the U.S. representative to a conference on the changing needs in the education of women.

Registration is on a first come, first-serve basis at the PSU Registrar's Office in Neuberger Hall. The course is also open on an audit basis to people not working for college credit.

In addition to her delegate duties at the 25th General Assembly of the U.N., Dr. Edmonds headed the U.S. dele-

TEENTIMES

by Lisa Bernadette

With the summer vacation over, many teens are returning to school with travelogue tales of adventure and experiment. For the rough and ready (and sturdy of limb), there were hitchhikes throughout the United States and Europe. All it took was a compact knapsack, a good thumb and lots of nerve. Said one teenage girl who traveled in France with another girl, "When I left on the trip, I was a kid. When I got home, I wasn't. Being on my own with nobody to bail me out of trouble but myself, changed me. Now I have more of a sense of responsibility."

Two teenage sisters traveled to South America with their parents, and found when they got home they'd been in the minority, spending vacation time with their folks.

"But for South America, it really was best," Lisa Bernadette said of the 17-year-old. "Two girls alone might have attracted the wrong kind of attention in an area that still puts a priority on protecting and shielding women." "Besides," said her sister, "it was great to have Dad to turn to when we wanted a souvenir that was a bit above the budget."

Three teenage boys who camped out for a month in one of the country's national parks found that it became a matter of pride, not to phone home for rescue when the going got rough. "I suppose it was a comfort to know we weren't all that far from home, but none of us wanted to be the first to give in."

A new wrinkle on smoking

By James L. Mack, M.D.

Trying to stay young - or at least look that way, is an obsession in this mad age. But looking young may be even tougher for men and women who smoke.

Facial wrinkles like crows-feet may be caused more by cigarette smoking than by exposure to sun and wind - according to Dr. H.W. Daniell of Redding, California. In a recent article in the Annals of Internal Medicine, he describes his study of 1104 subjects between the ages of 30 and 70. Each subject was asked to fill out a questionnaire about his or her smoking habits, sun exposure, weight changes, and medical history. Without seeing the questionnaires, the doctor first assigned each subject a wrinkle score from one to six. Close-up photographs were taken. And three other sets of observers also scored the pictures.

After all correlations were made, prominent wrinkling and heavy smoking were related for all age groups. Dr. Daniell suggests that smoking may cause wrinkling because nicotine causes the small blood vessels to contract.

Over a period of time, he says, this might cause deterioration in skin tissue.

The most striking finding, however, was the correlation between heavy wrinkling and heart disease. Among male smokers over 50, those with the highest wrinkle scores had a past history of heart attacks almost twice as great as those of men with the same smoking habits but less wrinkling. And of the fifteen smoking men who had the highest wrinkle scores, seven developed major cigarette-related illnesses, including lung cancer and heart attacks, during the year after the study was completed. Deep facial wrinkles, says Dr. Daniell, can be a significant warning sign.

See your local tuberculosis and respiratory disease association about ways to kick the habit. It's a matter of life and breath.

Just like a clown

By Elizabeth Ann Churchwell

Sometimes I feel like a Clown, caught without his makeup on, much in need of a painted smile to keep the world from looking in.

No one questions when you are smiling, when you are listening to their cares, assuming, wrongly you've been blessed with no troubles of your own.

They see the painted smile, and never look beneath the troubled eyes. See the smile and think of laughter--Never knowing the heart is torn.

But... maybe it is just as well. So few really understand. Let them see the painted smile! Let them laugh at the Funny Clown!

The world's in need of much more laughter. It's doing "someone else" some good. Paint the smile for other people! Keep that smile on--all the time!

Some people just don't face the facts and think that what they see is real. Just pray they never see the clown--caught without his makeup on.

Charge account tuition

Portland State University's unique deferred tuition plan making it possible for students to pay while they learn will be extended to include part-time as well as full-time students.

Authorization to continue and expand the program, begun on an experimental basis last spring for full-time students only, was granted today by the State Board of Higher Education.

W.T. Lemman, PSU vice president for business and finance, said 1,156 students took advantage of the pay-as-you-learn program during spring quarter. Of these, he added, 149 were able to attend university classes who otherwise would have been unable to do so.

The PSU plan was designed primarily for the student who depends on a monthly income and finds it difficult to accumulate a full quarter's tuition in advance. Instead of paying the full amount of tuition at the time of registration, the student will pay a third down and the balance in two equal installments during the quarter. There also is a $3 service charge to cover bookkeeping costs.

The payment schedule for part-time students will be pro-rated on the basis of the course load and tuition charges assessed at the time of registration.

Lemman said the program has been accomplished without delay and the student only is asked to pick up a brief application and promissory note form at the University's Financial Aids Office. The office determines eligibility, and the student takes the form to the Accounting Office where the application is checked for outstanding financial obligations to the University. When approved, the student is given a "deferred tuition authorization" which he presents to the cashier at registration time. The entire process takes less than 15 minutes.

Good-bye Si and good luck
