An Equal Opportunity Employer.

Community Calendar

The first of a series of informal employment counseling discussions will be held March 8 in the Women's Resource Center of the YWCA. Ray Duskin, field representative for the State of Oregon, will speak on the apprenticeship programs and job availabilities that they offer. The program is sponsored by the Job Bank, a non-profit cooperative effort, organized to help find employment for men and women who wish to get into jobs traditionally open to members of one sex only. The discussion is scheduled at 7:30 p.m. and is open to the public.

Portland Community College will offer three sections for industrial and retail security personnel. Each course carries three credits and tuition is $28.50 per class. Classes begin March 28 and run through June 8. To reserve a space in the class, call 244-6111, Extension 275.

Portland State University dance director Maranee Rhea has announced a spring dance workshop which for the first time includes mime.

Modern dance, ballet and mime will each be offered in a 10-week session. Entrance fee for a session is $20, and enrollment at Portland State University is not necessary.

Michael Hoeye and Kathy McNursey will return from winter term workshops to teach modern dance and ballet respectively. Stanley Sherman will instruct mime.

Hoeye studied dance in New York under Alwin Nikolais. Miss McNursey has studied at the Portland Ballet School for 10 years and also studied in New York. Sherman recently returned from study in France and has offered mime workshops at the Firehouse Theater in Portland.

The non-credit classes will meet at various times during the week in the dance studio at the PSU Physical Education building. Complete scheduling and registration information is available from PSU's Department of Health and Physical Education, 229-4401.

Amerson leads OES Falcons

The fact that Greg Amerson chose to remain at the Oregon Episcopal Schools for his four years of high school says quite a bit about the young man. Playing forward, Greg carried the team for his last three years when he doubtless could have started for most any AAA team in the area. But it was education, Greg's academic matters, that kept him at OES to experience the close personal brand of education offered there.

This is why Falcon coach Gary Craigmiles repeatedly makes reference to the "debt" the Falcon squad owes Amerson. And some debt it is. After an auspicious debut as a freshman on a highly successful 14-8 Falcon squad, Amerson suffered through two straight 6-14 seasons with the team. Heaven knows what the records would have been like without Amerson's presence on the club, he being the only player to score consistently and around 20 points per game -- against Northwest League powerhouses like Vernonia, Warrenton and Knappa.

This season Amerson is a senior on a club that is 9-6 going into its last game of the season. And again, it's safe to say that Amerson is doing the major work in carrying the club. This season, like the last, Amerson is leading the league in at least seven categories, not the least of which are scoring and rebound averages. Undoubtedly the best pure shooter in the league, Amerson has taken 261 shots in 15 games -- and has hit 55% of them, with an incredible 22.0 per game scoring average. And besides doing most of the Falcon scoring, he has led the league almost all season in rebounding with a 16.3 per game average.

These impressive statistics explain why Amerson has the entire league gasping at his feats. He drew thunderous applause at Jewell earlier in the season for sinking a 35-foot shot at the buzzer. Everyone knows that Amerson will always be called upon to take such a shot; but knowing and stopping are two different things; which explains why Amerson has been able to sink those "buzzer shots" on two other occasions this year. Amerson is a smooth, quick performer who can set the pace of a game virtually by himself. Most of his shots are at least 15 feet out, but he can skate through the key for offensive rebounds if he misses. And, though he is only 6'2", his jumping ability is such that he can, by far, outjump any player on his team, though he is not the tallest.

Off the court, Amerson has remained very modest about his achievements throughout the year, preferring to let his playing do the talking. Often he is not aware of how many points he has scored. His jaw dropped once this season when he was told he had scored 27 points against Western Mennonite. He had felt he "couldn't hit the broadside of a barn," although he shot 65% that night. Opponents are not likely to stop him, even when fouling; Amerson shoots 75% from the free throw line. The radio announcer at Tillamook Catholic conceded that "Amerson gets his 25 points, so we'd better guard everyone else." This was after another typical Amerson performance: 24 points in a losing effort, as he hit his final six shots in a row within four minutes.

Coach Craigmiles maintains that better things are ahead for Amerson. Having been accepted to the University of San Francisco, Greg plans to continue his basketball career. Craigmiles explains that part of the problem with Greg is that he's been playing far below his caliber. "He's better than anyone in the league, but he's too good, really. He tries to cover for the mistakes of his teammates and gets into foul trouble. He feeds them passes that are so good, they didn't expect them. If he's given half a chance in college, he'll really be something."

It's been a long way for a kid who began as a phenomenal freshman and wound up a bona fide superstar. Except in his own league, Greg Amerson's talents are, sadly, little known.

At this point the new basketball coach for the 1973-74 season has not yet been chosen. However, Gary Craigmiles is assuming the position of full-time athletic director and he'll also coordinate the athletic program for the Middle and Upper Schools at OES.

Miss Sudha Chavan, a native of India, will demonstrate how to prepare traditional Indian cooking March 12 at Cleveland High School. An Indian curry dish, rice dishes, an Indian salad, and a sweet dish will be prepared and sampled by participants. Recipes will be available. Miss Chavan, a former high school teacher in Nagpur, is in the United States studying for her Masters Degree in Education. She finds many Americans are interested in the more exotic Indian dishes, but few have a "point of reference," never having eaten authentic Indian cooking. The session will be held in the Cleveland High School foods room at 7:30 p.m. Admission is $1.00. The event is sponsored by Portland Community College. For more information, contact PCC Community Services, 244-6111.
