Richard Roundtree, who was recently named one of the world's best dressed men, is as famous for his clothes as he is for his exploits as Harlem's legendary private detective, John Shaft. For MGM's Shaft in Africa, Roundtree sheds the leather duds and machine gun that helped him through his first two New York adventures, for an African native costume and a fighting stick that are instrumental in his uncovering an international slave trading ring. Shaft in Africa was produced by Roger Lewis and directed by John Guillermin from a screenplay by Stirling Silliphant. It was filmed on location in Ethiopia, Spain and New York City.
