

Democrats elect conference delegates

The 1972 Democratic National Convention called for a Democratic National Conference to consider Party organization and matters of policy in 1974. Preparation of a Charter, or Constitution, to be considered by the delegates to the Conference was delegated to the Charter Commission which is headed by former Governor of North Carolina and President of Duke University, Terry Sanford. Oregon delegates or commissioners are Honorable Earl Haas of Portland and State Chairman Caroline Wilkins. They were named by the DNC chairmen in 1973 and 1974 and approved by the DNC. The Charter Commission recommended the number and distribution of delegates (total 2035) and the dates (December 6-8, 1974) for the Conference to the Democratic National Committee. The DNC adopted the recommendations at the National meeting in Louisville, Kentucky in October, 1973.

Plans for electing Oregon's delegation began in the Congressional District meetings in late summer of 1973. Suggestions formulated from these meetings went into a proposal which was presented to the State Central Committee in December, 1973 at Roseburg. The plan was adopted by the Committee at a meeting in Corvallis January, 1974. It was presented to the Democratic National Committee in February and is on file in Washington, D.C. From the Plan: "Delegates to the 1974 Conference on Democratic Party Organization and Policy will be elected by a formula based on equal weight to population and Democratic registration within each Congressional District. This results in the allocation of four delegates to each Congressional District.

The selection of the delegates to the National Conference chosen in Congressional Districts shall be by 100 delegates from counties within the Congressional District; the county delegates will be apportioned by the same formula as delegates to the National Conference and elected at county conventions. A majority shall constitute a quorum. There shall be no proxy votes."

All counties will hold conventions on June 15th between 9 a.m. and 9 p.m. within the county; all Congressional Districts will hold conventions on July 20th between 9 a.m. and 9 p.m. within the District. These dates in no way conflict with Party organization.

All Multnomah County Democrats are urged to attend their County Convention on Saturday, June 15th, at Cascade College Cafeteria, 705 N. Killingsworth, at 1:00 p.m.

Senator seeks post

George L. Brown, Colorado's only Black State Senator, has announced that he is now an active candidate for the post of Lieutenant Governor in his state and expects to be part of a "winning Democratic ticket in November." The announcement coincided with the release of a Democratic Party caucus poll that showed the candidate leading his three lesser-known rivals total by a better than two to one margin.

Brown, who has served in the legislature 19 years, said he would not campaign as a "Black candidate", and does not expect his race to help or hurt him. He will campaign, however, on his legislative record, which he said "demonstrates a broad concern in dealing with problems of statewide interest."

Club assists disabled

The Indoor Sports Club is not an athletic club as the name seems to imply, but is a national club for the disabled. Its members are persons who are in wheelchairs, walk with crutches or braces, are bedridden, or are severely disabled.

The club was formed in 1930 as the result of a shut-in's effort to find a pen pal, and has developed into a social and rehabilitative organization.

The Portland Chapter, which is celebrating its 25th anniversary this year, is making an effort to interest minority group members and young people.

Meetings usually consist mainly of socializing, a short business meeting, sometimes entertainment, and dinner. Meetings are held the fourth Sunday of the month at Matt Dishman Center.

The organization also serves as a "watchdog" on legislation affecting the handicapped, assists fund-raising drives for the March of Dimes and Red Cross, and participates in "Employ the Handicapped" projects.

MLK plans banquet

The Martin Luther King, Jr. Scholarship Fund of Oregon will present an "Annual Scholar's Award Banquet and Fashion Show" on Saturday, June 15th, at 7:30 p.m. at the Lloyd Center Auditorium.

Theme of the banquet is "Minorities in Higher Education: Postive Community Progress". Mrs. Gladys McCoy will be the banquet speaker.

Theme of the fashion show is "Fashions Dynamic". Reservations can be made by calling 229-4475 until Thursday, June 13th, between 10:00 a.m. and 3:00 p.m. Reservations are for "couples only" and are $10.00.

Women's Studies schedules classes

Among the six Women's Studies classes offered during Summer Session at Portland State University are three special programs which are new to the Women's Studies curriculum.

An English class, Older Woman in Literature, will be offered July 8-19 from 12:30-4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. Students will attempt to define what age determines an "older" woman in literary works and then explore the different images older women have assumed in literature, including witches, comedians or grandmothers. The instructor is Marjorie U'Ren, a lecturer in PSU's English department.

An evening seminar on Influential Women in American Thought and Life will be offered from June 25th through July 16th at 6:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday. The class will be a study of the lives of women who have had an influence on American culture and thought from colonial to modern times. Instructor is Marguerite Marks, currently an assistant director of foreign students admissions at PSU and who holds a master's degree in history from PSU.

Another English class, Disguised Lady: A Thematic Approach to Medieval and Renaissance Literature, will be offered June 17-28 from 12:30-4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. The class will examine the literary progress of the woman who, in early literary history, was able to move about freely by putting on male clothing. The instructor is Ruth Harrison, assistant professor of English.

Other classes offered under Women's Studies during Summer Session are: Literature of Women, Psychology of Women and an education class, Curriculum Development in Women's Studies.

U of P registers

Early registrations for Summer 74 at the University of Portland are now being accepted according to Norman O. Stewart, summer sessions director. First classes begin June 17th, with summer commencement on August 9th.

Over 140 undergraduate and graduate courses providing full semester credits are offered through eight-week courses, two to four week courses, and workshops.

The university is continuing its summer master's programs in which students may earn their graduate degree by attending summer sessions only. All programs may also be completed by a combination of attending summer sessions and regular sessions, or regular sessions only.

The most extensive summer master's programs are offered by the School of Education, School of Business Administration, School of Engineering, and Departments of Music, English, History, and Speech and Drama. Graduate degree courses are also available to students qualifying under the Law Enforcement Education Program.

Summer sessions catalogs and further information may be obtained from the summer sessions office, University of Portland, telephone 283-7260.

CUE studies Asians

Stephen Schneider, Director of the Center for Urban Education (CUE), announced that CUE has received a grant for $1200 from the Northwest Regional General Assistance Center to conduct a survey of the presence and participation of Asian Americans in Portland area schools. The survey will also develop profiles of Portland's Asian American community organizations.

The intent of the survey is to create a greater level of awareness between area school systems and the Asian American community.

Stefan Tanaka, a 1974 graduate of Linfield College, will coordinate the survey.

HEW funds hospital

Congressman Charles Rangel, Chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus, has announced that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare intends to award additional grant funds to the Delta Community Hospital, Mound Bayou, Mississippi. HEW had earlier announced that current grant support for this health facility serving the all-Black town of Mound Bayou would be allowed to expire on May 31st. As it has done in the past, the Congressional Black Caucus intervened on behalf of the hospital with Federal officials. HEW's position that it does not fund hospitals was unacceptable to the Caucus, since the Department supports hospitals under the Public Health Service Act and through the Indian Health Service Program.

"As a result of Caucus efforts and the concern of the national Black community," stated Rangel, "HEW will support the Delta Community Hospital for a 12-month period to allow it to convert from a grant funding basis to a fiscal procedure more customary for hospital operations."

The five-county area of Northwest Mississippi, the heart of the Delta region of the State, is one of the poorest areas of the country, and can hardly afford to lose any of its existing resources. Yet, despite its extreme poverty and the desperate need to improve the quality of life, this five-county area was threatened with the impending loss of its two most important health facilities - The Mound Bayou Community Hospital and the Delta Health Center, an outpatient component.

The hospital and health center have survived various crises over the past several years. In 1972 Governor Waller of Mississippi vetoed Mound Bayou Federal funding, and forced the Office of Economic Opportunity to override his objections twice. Last year the health facilities were once again threatened when they were transferred to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare instead of the Government Services Administration. This year HEW informed the Mound Bayou Community Hospital, Inc. that funds would be cut off as of May 31, 1974.

Throughout these various crises Mound Bayou residents appealed to local, state and national representatives to no avail. "Apparently," said Chairman Rangel, "the needs of Black constituents are low on the priority list of many Mississippi officials. However, the Congressional Black Caucus will continue to attempt to address the needs of Blacks all over the country, especially those whose national representatives are unresponsive."

Womens works shown

University of Portland is privileged to have a select works crafted by 31 individual artists of this unique membership. Women Painters Of The West paintings, collages, linocuts, serigraphs, ink/metals, and intaglios may be seen June 5th through June 22nd in the University Library Gallery during regular library hours on the University of Portland campus.

Representing California, Texas and Oregon, The Women Painters Of The West is a non-profit organization of 179 participating members. As a group these women offer expanded exhibition opportunities to western women artists, and administer a scholarship loan fund which assists promising women art students.

In 1921, one year after the 19th Amendment to the Constitution granted women the right to vote, The Women Painters Of The West was founded. It had become clear that if women were to achieve professional status as artists, as in other fields, it would be necessary to organize.

Artists participating in the current select exhibition are Hilda Bellanca, Sally Bradley, Lucille Brown-Greene, Mildred Conte, Christine Daily, Helen Dodds, Bonni Doering, Hazel Harper, Mary Hershberger, Astrid Johnson, Sherrill Kahn, Julie LaVee, Connie Leach, and Ruth Leverton.

Marguerite Lindeman, Helen Luitjens, Mary Messenger, Julop Moser, Geneva Oster, Effie Parnell, Marie Poche, Katherine Page Porter, Dorothy Rankin, Mirian Stein, Bobbi Stoll, Betty Thompson, Martha Lou Tucker, Peggy Tuttle, Mary Van Houten, Connie Von Brieson, and Jan Wagner.

Individual works may be purchased. The exhibit is being circulated by Old Bergen Art Guild, Bayonne, New Jersey. The public is invited to this exhibit free of charge.

In southern China, as in Burma and Siam, rice is the central food, and all else—soup, meat, fish, vegetables and condiments—are "garnish."

Starts Thursday.
