Your Employment Service

QUESTION: What are some of the employer services offered through the Job Service offices of the Oregon Employment Division?

ANSWER: First of all, the Employment Division offers a complete placement and referral service. Professional interviewers select referrals from the largest pool of qualified applicants in each community. This service includes careful screening, fast service and computerized job listings. Recruitment of workers of all types of skills and abilities is on a local, regional and national basis when necessary.

Employment Division offices provide equal employment opportunity by referring qualified applicants for consideration regardless of race, color, religion, sex, age, handicap or national origin. Employers, including those with government contracts, can be assisted with meeting Affirmative Action requirements.

Employment Division staff can assist employers to provide on-the-job training through various State and Federal programs.

Industrial services include assistance in cutting training time and cost, lower turnover, selection and effective assignment of workers, analyzing and structuring jobs and modification of jobs for more efficiency.

Through the Division's Research and Statistics section and local offices, reliable, current, comprehensive information on labor supply and demand can be made available both locally and on a Statewide basis, published monthly. This information covers population changes, movement of industry, hiring, layoffs, and wages, current and future.
