Duties of state police officers are varied and interesting: Recruit Joseph James writes a ticket for an errant motorist. (Upper left)

Trooper Olander Ausborn helps a tourist find a scenic route to the coast. (Upper right)

A visit to Bethel Child Development Center to show the children the Trooper is their friend tops off the day.

State police need women

The Superintendent of State Police, Robert R. Fisher, expresses concern over the small number of applications that have been received since the announcement was made that the Department would be hiring women to work traffic patrol.

Fisher said that since the announcement was made, only 34 applications from females have been received. He went on to say that, although his department has been actively recruiting throughout the state and on college campuses, only a few applications are at the present time.

"I am amazed," said Fisher, "at the light response to our announcement. I know there are many women in our state who are well qualified to become State Troopers."

Applications will continue to be accepted at all State Police stations until May 31st. Testing will be conducted during the month of June.

Charles Jordan has a long record of service to his community.

Charles Jordan has a concern for the people of Portland that goes beyond political rhetoric.

Charles Jordan represents those in our community who have never had a strong voice in government before.

Charles Jordan has the "guts" to address the hard problems of the 70's -- crime, high unemployment, inflation and rising energy costs.

John Graham is a Manager Trainee at Zale's Jewelry. Graham has been an employee of Zale's for a year and has worked himself up to this position.

"Without a doubt, Zale's is an equal opportunity employer," Graham says. "The door is wide open for any wide-awake, alert individual."

Graham states that he is concerned that more Black people shop Zale's since their business is sought by the management. The Observer congratulates Mr. Graham and Zale's and encourages our readers to patronize Zale's.

"We must spend our money only where we are also allowed to work."
