PSU classes study city

"Portland - The City" is one of several package programs offered by Portland State University this summer.

Courses in chemistry, geography, urban studies, history and sociology will be offered in the Portland package.

Some of the featured courses include:

- "Physical Environment of Portland," which will examine the rainfall pattern, how people change the climate of the city, pollution, the water supply, the possum in the city, causes of the city's sounds and smells, flora and its origins, and how decisions affecting Portland's environment are made. Guest lecturers will be involved.
- "Portland on a Pass," which includes seven days of study in the field via a Tri-Met bus pass. This popular class was filled during advance registration but there is a waiting list, according to Summer Session Director Charles White.
- "Portland Artifact and Archive," which will interpret the man-made environment as a living museum of history.
- "Comparative Urban Problems," which will compare problems of European cities to American cities, with particular focus on Portland.

• "Future of Mass Transit," which will examine the issue in the United States as well as its development in Portland.

• "Historic Preservation Workshop," which will focus on the history, use and rehabilitation of public monuments. Extensive walking tours of downtown Portland will be included.

The study packages have been designed so students may take several courses without time conflicts.

General registration day is June 21st. Formal admission requirements are waived during summer session and registration continues up to the day the class starts without late fees. There is no out-of-state tuition and senior citizens may take classes at no cost. Evening classes will be dismissed before the final Tri-Met runs.

Catalogs and time schedules are available through the Summer Session Office, Portland State University, P.O. Box 751, Portland, Oregon 97207 (229-4081).
