IBM has immediate opportunities for Electrical Engineers, Mechanical Engineers and Materials and Process Engineers at their Manufacturing & Development Facility in San Jose, California

IBM is offering opportunities for professional growth, personal development and a chance to make creative technical contributions at its San Jose facility. This location has prime responsibility for high performance disk files, mass storage subsystems, tape drives and system printer products. San Jose is a metropolitan community located in the Santa Clara Valley, 50 miles south of San Francisco.

We have immediate needs in the following technical areas:

Electrical Engineers with computer science experience to design hardware and develop programs and procedures for use in the production and testing of our products. Openings require the ability to handle logic, analog and/or digital circuit design or microprogramming.

Mechanical Engineers to work in support of various product and process lines in file, disk and magnetic head technologies. You will design, build and debug mechanical tools and test equipment and also run process capability studies, process optimization analyses and component evaluations.

Materials and Process Engineers to develop and control coating processes. Should have the skills to define equipment parameters, process control parameters and optimize quality, cost reduction, and field improvements through equipment and process innovations required for pilot and production line support of various products and processes. Openings exist for people with chemical engineering, chemistry, material science, ceramics, metallurgy, and physics backgrounds.

Excellent Benefits

IBM provides liberal company-paid benefits, including 11 holidays, vacation, life insurance, tuition refund, retirement, medical and dental plans. Relocation assistance provided.
