Rehabilitated house for sale

Portland Development Commission is offering for sale a house that has been completely rehabilitated under a pilot project.

The house, which was an abandoned house in poor condition was purchased by PDC and rehabilitated by VETS of Oregon, Inc., a non-profit veteran's group. The ten Vietnam veterans who were trained on the project through a Multnomah/Washington County Consortium CETA grant have all gone to union jobs in construction.

The rehabilitation, which included new construction, complete remodeling of the interior, a new heating system, and new wiring, siding and roof, is completed and the house is ready for sale.

The purchase price of the three bedroom house, which is at 4206 N.E. Garfield, is $32,000, with a five percent downpayment. Financing will be twenty years at 6 1/2 percent. To be eligible, the purchaser must meet income guidelines ($16,900 for a family of four), meet audit standards and live in the house. Priority will be given to a family.

Persons who wish to purchase must take their applications to Mariam Scott, 34 N.E. Killingsworth by 5:00 p.m., July 31st (288-8131). The purchaser will be selected by a random drawing on August 3rd at 4206 N.E. Garfield. The Finance Section of PDC will process the applications.

An open house will be held on July 30th from noon to 4:00 p.m.

Portland wrestlers champions

Anthony Amado, Jr., and Marc Sprague, Jr., of Portland have won positions on the U.S. World Wrestling Team by defeating the opponents at the National Championships in Lincoln, Nebraska. Anthony, fifteen, and a freshman at Benson, won the National Championship in the Advanced Class.

Marc Sprague, Jr., thirteen, and a graduating Whitaker Middle School, won second in the 90-pound event but won a place on the World Team by defeating the Champion in a "wrestle-off."

Andre Taylor, took first place in the Junior 79-pound class. Andre, who is eleven, is too young for the World Team. Of seventeen wrestlers participating in the National Championships from Portland, there were fourteen medals won.

The World Championships will be held August 3rd through 5th in Albuquerque, New Mexico.

Physicist warns nuclear risk

Current plans are for nuclear wastes to be buried underground in salt beds or other areas where the geologic structure is believed to be capable of isolating the nuclear materials.

Bridenbaugh said the Department of Energy report showed a number of deficiencies in waste disposal technology:

- Technical issues relating to selection of disposal medium, specific sites, and repository designs require objective research to resolve.
- Early demonstration of geologic disposal of a limited number of spent fuel assemblies is recommended.
- Interim storage facilities away from nuclear sites will be required.
- The 1985 target date for operation of a national waste disposal will not be met.
- The federal government should take over all permanent waste disposal facilities including the six current commercial low-level waste burial grounds.

Bridenbaugh told the Council that enough technological progress has been made to show that there are problems. Among the unsolved difficulties are geological issues — the behavior of salt material, hydrology, and the stability of geologic structures where waste materials might be buried. He said that safe storage of radioactive wastes for a reasonable period of time would not be of concern, but to insure that a storage facility will be safe for hundreds or thousands of years is difficult.

He warned that the entire procedure for disposal must be studied, not just what happens after storage. One concern is sloppy handling by employees during removal and transportation.

Bridenbaugh added that the method of decommissioning nuclear plants now preferred by utility companies — covering the entire plant with dirt then uncovering it at a later date — is not acceptable according to current rules which say the site must be returned to its natural state in a reasonable period of time.

He said discrepancies in PGE's application include: 1) no identification of unresolved problems of waste disposal; 2) representation that waste disposal technology is available; 3) implication that problems are political; 4) implication that decommissioning technology is now available; 5) implication that low-level waste disposal problems have been solved.

Deficiencies are that no contingency plan for waste disposal and decommissioning are included and no assessment of cost. There is no plan for other supplies of electricity in case the plant is closed for a long period.

Since leaving General Electric Bridenbaugh has been a consultant for national governments, states and environmental groups. He has been a consultant for the Swedish government; the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission, the State of California Energy Commission, the State of New York, and the State of Illinois.

Volunteers needed

Volunteers are needed at the Washington Park Zoo for the education programs. The programs include: Zoo Days, a program where volunteers go to schools in the Tri-County area (Multnomah, Clackamas, and Washington counties) to give live animal demonstrations and slide shows; zoo tours for school and other groups; free days at the zoo for senior citizens, handicapped persons and children.

Any adult over the age of eighteen may join the program. Fall orientation will begin with a social day, zoo tour and potluck lunch on September 7th, at 9:30 a.m. The rest of the orientation classes will be held on Tuesdays and Thursdays during September, from 9:30 a.m. to 2:00 p.m.

Make your plans for the fall now! Join a lively, active group, learn about the Washington Park Zoo and meet the animals who reside there. Call for your application now (or come to the zoo for a visit and pick up your application while you are there). Applications will be accepted until August 31, 1978.

For more information call the Washington Park Zoo education office at 228-0758 or 226-1561. Be a ZOO GUIDE!!!
