

Bits & Pieces

by Ruth Spencer

Mr. and Mrs. Luther Bell (Lillian) recently returned from an exciting fourteen day Alaskan cruise that took them to many interesting ports. Highlight of their trip was Glacier Bay described as "rivers of moving ice." Mrs. Bell considered her trip to be unbelievably beautiful and very educational.

King Tut

 "there is only one God!" The Hebrews in captivity paid strict attention — and "The Greeks called them Gods." (Egypt Under The Pharaohs, Putnam and Sons; Diop, 'The African Origin of Civilization', National Geographic Magazine, May, 1965.)

The specific tragedy detailed by the citations is that later, 26th Dynasty, 664 B.C., this African King, Psammetichus, conceived what he thought to be a neat idea for keeping the Greek portions of the empire under strict control and surveillance — which was to infiltrate every crook and cranny of the empire with Greek-named, Greek-speaking Africans who understood all the cultural and administrative structures of the subject people. The consequence of this is that all of the genius and accomplishments of Greek-named Africans from this period to the glorious heights of Alexandria is attributed to the Greeks. Who for the most part were still sitting on stone furniture... and wearing animal skins — when not tripping off to the temple schools in Africa to learn civilization; "The Greeks sent their young men to be educated in Egypt, as today students from Egypt go to Europe: Atkinson, 'Magic, Myth and Medicine.'

This glorious company of culture-seekers (Minstrels) who brought back their knowledge to Greece as the alleged founders of Western Civilization included Plato, Thales, Democritus, Sophocles, Solon, Pindar and Pythagoras, among others. And from what we know now, about Psammetichus, any or all of them, could have been as Black as King Tut, "What's in a name?" (See Hogben, 'Mathematics For the Million'; Tompkins, 'Secrets of the Great Pyramid.')

This same tragic caper of King Psammetichus transcends 22 hundred years of time to provide false premise for the 'justification' of African slavery in Colonial America (viz aviz the liberal philosopher John Locke) — and 200 years later becomes the prediction for the 19th century concept "The manifest destiny of the white races, as exemplified in American territorial expansion, the return of the Blacks to slavery through, lynching, Jim Crow laws and loss of the franchise, and the almost total obliteration of that native American, the Indian. (Weinberg, 'Manifest Destiny'; Commager, 'Documents of American History'; Russell, 'History of Western Philosophy.')

And if that is not quite enough, in conclusion we shall take a brief look at King Tut's bloodline, sickle cells and all:

A. J. A. Rogers, an important historian of this era: "The 18th Dynasty of King Tut was of almost unmixed Negro strain; its two principal figures, Amenophis III and his son Akhenaten appear to have no white blood at all." (Sex and Race; Volume 1, 1943, Page 54.)

B. The German Historian Alexander Von Wuthenau says of Tutankhamen that "the features of King Tut, whose mother was of pure Black stock, are almost as Negroid as those of his captured Nubian enemies." ('Unexpected Faces in Ancient America: 1500 B.C.-A.D.', Page 136.)

And then there is the Jolly Green Giant, who before the Minstrels lay hold of him, was the green-skinned Osiris, the African God of vegetation and the resurrection function attendant to the Spring Equinox — appearing on temple walls throughout the 18th Dynasty of Tut. Thanks to Phtarch and Moret we are able to trace his birthday celebration to the first of the intercalary days (361st day corresponds to December 26th) — and in the 4th century, Pope Julius I fixed this eve as the official birthday of Christ, December 25th. Jolly Green Giant indeed! — Ho! Ho! Ho! Ho!
