

Up-date kitchen areas with new floors

If you want more kitchen space and have no place to expand, a minimum of expense and a maximum of imagination can transform any kitchen corner into a large multi-purpose living space.

Kitchens are growing, gaining in size. The wall that once separated the dining room and kitchen has been removed. In its place is an expanded space that incorporates areas for jotting down recipes, kitchen preparation and informal dining.

If you want more kitchen space and have no wall to remove, with a minimum of expense and a maximum of imagination you can transform any kitchen corner into a large multi-purpose living space.

First rule, don't feel you have to fill every area. The room will appear more spacious with lots of floor showing. Remember to select a no-wax floor that is easy to maintain.

If you're the least bit handy, you can save one-third the cost or more by installing the floor yourself. Wide widths of six, nine or twelve feet have solved the problem of seams in most rooms.

Next, push plants, table, chairs and other furniture against the walls. Select cool colors and light accents to punctuate the floor design. Wicker plant baskets and rush seats open up the area and give a sense of comfortable informality. One wall painted peach adds decorating drama.

For a floor to ceiling window effect, back light a plexiglass panel. As an energy saver and mood setter, hook the light to a dimmer switch.

Tie the corner together by hanging a large wicker basket on the back wall and a wicker lampshade over a simple table setting topped with seasonal flowers.

With these easy decorating up-dates and the flick of a switch you'll be able to transform this room into a comfortable work area by day or a romantic dining spot at night.
