DICK CLARK LOOKS AT THE 70s -- WITH THE JEFFERSONS

When executive producer Dick Clark decided to put together a TV special, "The Sensational, Shocking, Wonderful, Wacky '70s", a look at the music, the events and the trends of the past decade, which airs as a two-hour special on the NBC Television Network on Friday, January 4th, 9:00 to 11:00 p.m., one of the segments he wanted to include was a glance at some of the people who captured the imagination of the American public in the '70s.

And who better than two people who themselves captured the imagination of million through their hit series "The Jeffersons" -- Isabel Sanford and Sherman Hemsley -- to host the "People" segment?

"George" and "Louise" have reflected the changing times in the past decade, through their sometimes-serious, sometimes-comic portrayal of urban life. On the '70s special they will show the changing times of America and Americans in general.

And featured on the show are live performances by Gladys Knight & the Pips, with a medley of their hits; The Village People, who perform "Sleazy"; and Jimmie Walker, with a comedy monologue on sports heroes of the '70s.

Other magic moments on the special include interviews with superstars Diana Ross and Donna Summer, a memorable film footage of such as Hank Aaron, Muhammad Ali, Natalie Cole, Earth, wind & Fire, O.J. Simpson and Stevie Wonder.

A PERSONAL MOMENT FOR THOSE WHO CARE

Tomorrow a new day, the fulfillment of all my dreams. Today I'll just unhappily sit and wait. Today is the good old days we will look back on in twenty years from now. Today our health is probably better than it will be again. Today is our foundation block for the future but it doesn't have to be an unfinished cement block. Give this day to love and tomorrow will find today's memories hard to beat.
