'Commanders of the Rite' organizes here

Eleven, Thirty-third Degree, Prince Hall Masons, were organized by the Overseer for Oregon, Wm. B. Odom, into a chapter of "The Commanders of the Rite."

The Commanders of the Rite's purpose and motto: "While other people and organizations are talking about Faith and Brotherhood, this body is making a serious effort to make it a reality," and to stimulate, encourage, and aid, wherever masonically possible; downtrodden humanity in its efforts to achieve higher social economic and intellectual status.

The organization will provide scholarships and services to senior citizens and youth. They will continue the Mason's work with Crime Prevention.

Jones pushes stock investment

(Continued from Page 1 Col 6) investment brings a greater appreciation in value. That is, the stock should increase in worth more than when you bought it. And, there is an option you have. You can sell out your position or hold on longer to see if it will climb still higher.

"What do I specialize in? I like oil and gas stocks. The energy-related stocks. They are certain to be good through 1990. I became involved with them because I recognize numerous companies are looking for fuel in the nature of oil and gas and are exploring in all directions to find it."

Jones caught sight of some figures floating across the screen of his computer on the desk top. He stopped talking for a moment. The glitter in his eyes shone brighter and he smiled with quiet satisfaction.

"No more ticker-tape," Jones answered a question. "That went by the way quite a while ago. Now everything is done by computer, quickly and silently."

He comfortably scanned the large carpeted expanse of the W.S. Wein Company offices in the U.S. Bank Plaza. Jones has been associated with Wein company for some time and he mentioned that the present company has been in business in New Jersey since 1919. Branch offices are in Portland, Pittsburgh, Los Angeles, Denver, Dallas and London. When Wein opened this local office eight months ago, Nick joined them.

Jones had had experience as a stock broker with another company before Wein came to Portland, but most Portlaners will remember Nick Jones as a professional basketball player.

A graduate of Marshall High School who went to the University of Oregon on a four-year basketball scholarship, Nick played guard in pro-ball for seven years with the San Diego Rockets and the Golden State Warriors.

His career as a basketball player was interrupted by a stint with the U.S. Military. When he returned to civilian life, he decided to "use my brain and not my back."

"When I was a kid," Jones went on, "I banked on athletics for success. Finally I saw reality. I reached the place where I recognized there were only 200 jobs like mine had been and I had been fortunate. Now it was time to make a change."

"My current game plan is to get more minorities involved in the stock market, so I work the luncheon circuit with other stock brokers, conduct workshops and seminar through W.S. Wein and try to spread the word to the Black community.

"To become a stock broker," Jones said, "I had to pass an 8-hour written test of 250 questions by the National Association of Security Dealers. I've had economics; lots of mathematics; I think, I'm considered prudent. I have common sense. I am ready."

"Wein company brings new offerings to the public: a service in research performed at the home office in New Jersey. Among them are some "small dollar stocks" starting at $2.00 a share. Some of these have already risen to $5.00 a share. I predict some will go shortly to $10.00.

"A stock-market tip?" Why not? Nick Jones leans forward, says confidently, "Try High Stoy Technology, a medical technology; try Energy Methods, an oil and gas stock; try B.S.N. Corporation, a sporting goods outfit that makes basketball nets, tennis nets, fishing nets. They all have good futures. And they are selling around $2.00 or so a share!
"Just call me!"

Mozambique finds CIA plot

Mozambian Minister of Information Jose Luis Cabazo reported that activities carried out in his country by the recently dismantled CIA network were aimed at destabilizing the Mozambican government.

On March 4th the Peoples Republic of Mozambique expelled four US diplomats who were CIA officers. Investigations revealed that 14 US citizens had been conducting spy activities under diplomatic cover in Mozambique. Cabazo reported that statements made by alleged CIA agents and others now under arrest show that they tried to obtain information on the structure of the FRELIMO Party and the state as well as its leaders, including President Samora Machel.

He added that CIA agents attempted to recruit agents from the armed forces as well as from civil aviation and the Air Force.

Besides information on the Mozambique government, the agents collected information on refugees and militants of the liberation movements of South Africa, Namibia, East Timor, Western Sahara and Palestine.

"It is evident that the CIA transmitted to the spy services of the racist regime of Pretoria the information it obtained on the movements and activities of South African revolutionaries residing in Mozambique," Cabazo said.

Two Mozambican CIA agents, arrested along with others in the spy network, gave detailed explanations of the way they were recruited and the assignments they were given.

Josi Chipalo Massinga, 51, was an official of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs since 1975. He said he was first contacted by the CIA in 1966 when he was a student in New York and a representative of the FRELIMO movement. He was recruited in 1975 when he returned to New York as a member of the Mozambique delegation to the UN General Assembly. He was contacted by the same agent and won over with money. He said he gave regular reports to the CIA network on Mozambique relations with the USSR, Cuba and other socialist countries, the numbers of people from those countries working in Mozambique, information on Mozambique leaders and their differences, and the activities of the African National Congress.

Alcido Chivite was recruited in 1978 and reported on numbers and types of weapons, troop location and preparation, activities of members of liberation movements, and lists of arms used by ZANU and ZAPU.

Joao Carneiro Goncalves, a captain in the Mozambican Air Force, worked for three years as part of the CIA network. The officer, asked to become a CIA agent by the Mozambican Security Force, was the President's pilot. He was asked for information on Machel's activities, his personality and friends, as well as questions related to weaponry. Goncalves fed the CIA incorrect information for his government.

Ask Aunt Bea

Dear Aunt Bea,

Through unfortunate circumstances, my new husband has fathered a child for another woman who cares a lot about him, but he has convinced me he doesn't love her and don't want to be involved with her or the child.

I do believe he loves me and wants to be with me, but it's obvious he has great concern for his baby, especially now that the baby is ill. The more he tries to hide his feelings and talk around mentioning the baby, the more uncomfortable I become. What can I do to ease the tension that's building between us?

Confused

Dear Confused,

I suggest the two of you collect again at the round table and discuss better you'd both feel and how well things will work out.

Aunt Bea

Dear Aunt Bea,

I am a high school student and pretty popular, especially with the boys. I date a lot of them, but not serious with any. My mom thinks I'm a disgrace, but Aunt Bea, I date pretty decent boys and I prefer to date a lot of them so as not to get serious with any one. Because after a while a boy thinks you should satisfy his every need and I'm just not ready to get seriously intimate this matter a bit more and both be honest about your feelings and talk about it often and mention the baby as much as the subject of the little one comes up.

You'd be surprised how much or intimately serious. But I can't convince my mom that I know what I am doing. Maybe you can.

Not Serious

Dear Not Serious,

I admire your determination not to get serious yet. High school really isn't the place to be too serious about much else other than studies. However, you must convince your mom that you're enjoying the dating and not the dates.

From the Front Door

BY TOM BOOTHE

FROM THE FRONT DOOR, I have received many phone calls and in person comments regarding the March 19th and March 26th, from the Front Door publication in the Portland Observer. All comments have been positive and supportive of my position regarding Black "On Time" participation in Political processes and I have been encouraged to write more on this subject. My feelings are, "Once you speak and are heard, to keep saying the same thing ends up being counter productive." However, I have a proposition for all who are supportive.

If each person who is supportive would get your neighbors informed "ON TIME" and into the voting booth "ON TIME" would you believe we would be SOLVING the problem; as opposed to just TALKING about it. THEN LET'S DO IT, OK?

Another thing which I am concerned about is our attitude regarding our immediate community where we live. Many of our citizens will go down town, or in other parts of the city and behave respectfully and clean, then come home where we live and throw BEER BOTTLES on the streets and leave our streets and sidewalks littered with broken glass, paper and fast food boxes. There is no excuse for complaining and criticizing littered conditions, when it is us who are allowing our neighbors to be irresponsible to our community.

Here is an area which we as individuals can greatly improve, when we all decide to do so.

During February, I published a model of what I think should be a base regarding the establishment of a Policy of Principle, published as BLACK POLICY OF PRINCIPLE. It's contents were:

"Cleanliness, Wholesomeness, Honesty, Truthfulness and Respect shall be my policy of principle in all my relationships from this day forward; And I shall communicate this Policy of Principle with a Positive attitude to all whom I encounter."

Lets practice Cleanliness, the rewards are pure and genuine.

Again, you can't spend your time or money for a better purpose; Join with the Exodus Youth Mental Health Offensive, building our community into a better and safer place to live and raise our children.
