Thomas Brown and Paul Hanson, producers of Vietnam: The Endless War
(Photo: Richard J. Brown)

Vietnam: The endless war will be shown on KATU on Sunday at 6:00 p.m. The special features the unique problems faced by Vietnam war veterans, both when they returned to the US and today. Among the serious problems explored are delayed stress syndrome, cancer and other medical problems and birth defects of children, difficulties in finding work and the lack of respect and care afforded these veterans by the government and their fellow citizens.

Especially troubling is the government's refusal to accept responsibility and provide benefits for medical disabilities incurred by men who were exposed to agent orange.

Although the program mentions the high percentage of Blacks in the front lines, little is seen of the unique problems faced by Black vets.

The program is disturbing, disgusting, and worth seeing.
