

Jeffrey Banks by Glanzrock blends toupe, melon and aqua antique striped Shetland in the 3-button, non-vented sport coat and matching shawl-collared vest. Pleated trouser is in a beechwood-color velvet.

Black Chiffon, long and layered, is trimmed with ostrich at the plunging neck and dipping hems in this design by Ed Austin for Austin Zuur. Sleeves are translucent and waist is satin-wrapped.

Getting The Jump On Dots! More party time fun, this time it's Willi Smith's "Katy Keene" jumpsuit (remember the comic book heroine of the '50s who simply adored clothes). You'll simply adore the bare halter neckline, not-too-narrow pleated pants and the waist focused with a shiny patent belt. Cotton poplin color combinations of brown with yellow, beige with blue or grey with red.

Today's Fashions

Among the noted Black designers in today's fashion world are Ed Austin, Jeffrey Banks and Willie Smith, whose creations are featured on this page.

"What I do best," Ed Austin says, "is make you not only look but be more fabulous." And he does it by bringing out a woman's very best sense of herself through individual, highly styled clothes.

"As a designer, I can't dictate to my clients what they should wear, but I can help them discover that their own self-perceptions don't necessarily correspond to my image of them. I can get them thinking about themselves in a new way, suggest a different approach, a previously unimagined look. Then, you often find a change in behavior. I believe this is what a designer ultimately does: if he's creative, and if he can feel for people, the designer helps you to discover you."
