College athletes should be paid

by Al McGilberry

College football and basketball is moving onto the financial pages and off the sports pages. Folks, it is now classified as high finance or big business—and I mean big business. College football games draw big crowds at top prices. College Basketball stadiums are not big enough for the crowds they can hold. Now that the federal government and state governments have cut aid to the universities the sports factories on campus will pick up the slack.

The signs started when the football and basketball schedules were extended to more games. The basketball tourney was extended to more teams, and more bowl games appeared on the scene.

Behind all this activity stands television, calling all the shots and demanding more and more.

Greed is a funny thing. It sticks on all it touches in the sport life; principles and morals go right out the window.

The College Presidents forgot what they were there for—to educate and to train the future citizens. The man who can bring in the most money from all sources gets all the praise and tenure. This is now the Chancellor's prime job—to bring in more revenue. And what a job they are doing!

They turn their heads when deans of admission admit kids who can't read or write. Their only concern is can they run or jump or both.

College coaches whose payrolls are thin condemn other coaches for paying athletes too much money. Digger Phelps of Notre Dame University needs more money to keep pace with the swift providers of his profession.

I am hoping that very soon someone of stature will come forward and declare all Division I College Sports semi-pro. Let this arm be an investment package. Let the kids learn think trade to prepare for the N.F.L. Let the N.F.L. pay for this preparation and cut out the sham and deceit.

Then the games will be real and the cheating will stop. I love Moses Malone. When he got out of high school he listened to the colleges and the professionals try to lure him. To Moses they all sounded the same. He just took the highest bidder and started playing ball.

Come on Coach, pay the guys and let's play ball.

Solar water heaters free

A federal Department of Energy grant ($24,507) has been awarded to Jim Cason of CaSun Solar Mechanical to install five solar hot water systems on five low-income owner-occupied homes in North and Northeast Portland.

Homeowners with a good roof facing south will have a solar hot water system installed free of charge. Homeowners must be willing to hold one open house this year and be willing to learn about solar so they can share their experiences with their neighbors.

If you live in North or Northeast Portland and are interested, call Portland Sun Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday for a free site visit to determine your house's solar potential and to find out more about this program. Portland Sun's number is 239-7470.

Notice Of Special District Election May 18, 1982

The ballot measure printed below will be presented to the qualified voters of Portland Public School District No. 1 at the primary election May 18, 1982. The polls will be open from 8:00 am to 8:00 pm.

REVISED TAX BASE TO MAINTAIN BASIC EDUCATION FOR PORTLAND'S CHILDREN

QUESTION: Shall the 1968 school tax base be revised to protect basic education programs for Portland's children?

PURPOSE: Replaces one-year levies approved last year and the old, inadequate tax base with a revised tax base of $150,747,080.

Provides funds for operating expenses including teachers, textbooks, supplies and maintenance to maintain basic education for 52,400 Portland children.

Ensures that 100% of the Portland School District Levy qualifies for State property tax relief.

Explanation: Despite recent reductions in levels of administration and classroom support, inflation and reduced levels of State and Federal support require a revised tax base to prevent a major decline in the quality of education for Portland's children.

Voters last revised the tax base back in 1968. In 1981-82, the base was $92,364,976. That same year votes approved additional levies of $25,781,914; of that amount, 84.5% did not qualify for property tax relief.

This measure will increase the property tax rate which will be partially offset for many homeowners by State tax relief.
