Food gathered for needy

"The need is greater than ever before and the response is the best ever. People are helping in so many ways...giving time and money and food," says Tim Hornbecker, Executive Director, St. Vincent de Paul.

More than 71,000 pounds of food were collected in Portland area neighborhoods the past two weekends and another 60,000 pounds has been contributed by local grocers and food distributors. The 131,000 pound total makes Portland's St. Vincent de Paul Christmas food drive the biggest such effort in the country.

Because it was not possible to get poultry donated this year, St. Vincent de Paul must purchase $28,000 worth of chickens and turkeys. $12,000 in cash contributions has been received to date.

Food boxes containing ingredients for a holiday meal and enough food for a week will be distributed by volunteers Saturday. Hornbecker estimates that at least 7,500 people will receive food.
