1983 NISSAN PULSAR NX COUPE

Dimension in sporty cars

Nissan has taken a new direction in small car technology with the introduction of the 1983 Nissan Pulsar NX—the efficiency and function of front-wheel-drive, but with a sporty flavor.

"At Nissan, we are well aware that today's car buyer demands more than just fuel economy," said C.P. (Chuck) King, senior vice president, sales of Nissan U.S.A.

"Performance, economy, drivability, roominess and looks are all equally valid concerns and the all-new five-passenger Nissan Pulsar NX was built to deliver them all."

The most striking feature of the Nissan Pulsar NX is its aerodynamic wedge-shaped styling, with a long sloping hood, concealed pop-up headlights and short rear deck with built-in spoiler.

Two transmissions are available, a five-speed manual overdrive and an optional three-speed automatic with lock-up torque converter for increased efficiency.

The new car's standard features include rack-and-pinion power steering, front disc brakes and a deluxe trim with sunroof, 4-speaker AM/FM/MPX stereo radio and full wheel covers.

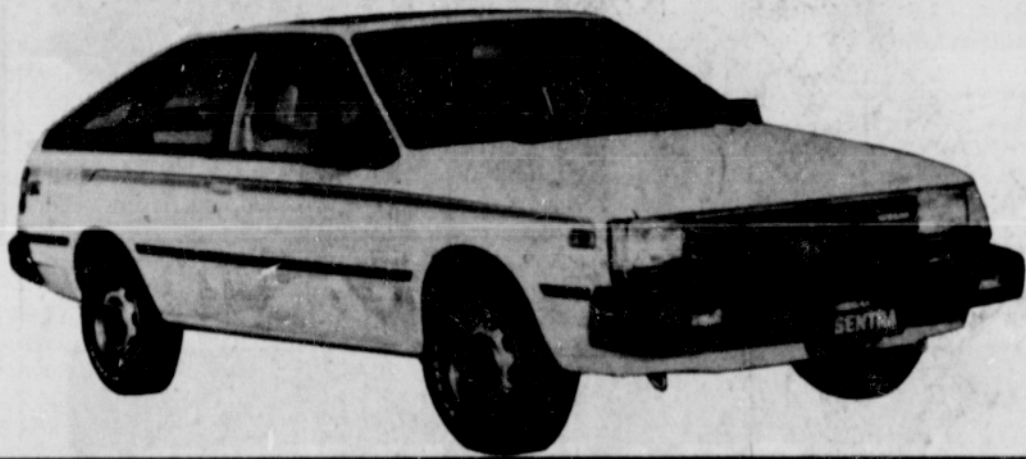

NX is on sale now at Jim Fisher Datsun in Portland.
