

Business Notes

A recent poll of 46 establishment economists by Blue Chip Economic Indicators projects a 10% average unemployment rate for 1983. (Wall Street Journal, 5/11) And big business executives meeting in Hot Springs, Virginia on May 14 said "they would rehire few of the workers they laid off during the recession, no matter how strongly the economy recovers." (New York Times, 5/15)

In response to predictions by Labor Secretary Donovan that the unemployment rate would drop to 7.5% range in 1984, Lane Kirkland recently pointed out that "the rate of growth would have to rise quickly to 7 or 8 percent of the gross national product," to achieve such a lowering of the rate of unemployment. Furthermore, he noted, "failure to reach that level will mean that we're going to have millions of unemployed workers and deprived young people for the foreseeable future." (NYT, 5/25)

Because of special breaks, the actual federal corporate tax rates paid in 1981 varied dramatically from industry to industry, according to Tax Analysts, a consulting firm. Commercial banks actually had enough breaks to carry forward into 1982 and therefore paid no taxes. The apparel industry, by contrast, had an effective corporate tax rate of 39.7 percent. The average rate for all industries in 1981 was 20.5 percent.

The so-called recovery is a weak one indeed, especially for the working class. The projected growth rates for the rest of the year, and the 3.1% increase in the gross national product (GNP) for the first quarter, are well below historical averages for the initial stages of cyclical upturns. And this "upturn" comes on the heels of the most prolonged, and in many ways deepest, of post-war contractions.

The City of Portland's Mt. Tabor Hydroelectric Station is expected to earn some $6 million over the life of a power contract with Portland General Electric Company. The City Council recently approved the 30-year agreement.

Mt. Hood Community College believes it has found a method of teaching businesses a quick lesson or two.

The college has opened the Center for Community and Economic Development that will pull old and new programs together to help firms educate and retrain workers as well as planning courses to update knowledge of business owners and managers.

Center director Mike Dillon, formerly the college's personnel director, will spend the summer planning a comprehensive approach to his mission. However, if a business calls today, he has some plans and programs that will help.

Since 1970, nearly half of the increase in the female labor force has been among women aged 26 to 34. Today, one out of four women workers is in this age group, according to "Women at Work: A Chartbook," published by the U.S. Department of Labor.

A total of 171.5 million board feet of softwood labor, Scribner scale, was exported from the Pacific Northwest in March, down 25.2 percent from February and a 24.9 decline from March 1982, according to the Pacific Northwest Forest and Range Experiment Station.

My husband and I did everything together. We even decided on our funeral plans together. When John died it was much easier for me. There were so many things that had to be done. I know I carried out his wishes because we discussed them ahead of time. We even had money put aside in a special plan available through our funeral home. It was a great relief, I wish more people knew about it. Please send for our free booklets on funeral planning.

Please send me, at no obligation, your free booklets titled "A Time For Sharing" and "Plan Your Own Farewell."
