Camp Fire Kids 1984 Candy Sale

Camp Fire is a co-ed youth organization founded in 1910. Until 1976, it was known as the Camp Fire Girls. Its philosophy is to teach children skills by doing. The emphasis on small groups provide our youth with individual attention and personal growth. Camp Fire programs are based on accepted principles and techniques from the fields of informal education, recreation, group work and child development.

Why do Camp Fire kids sell candy? Their annual candy sale is the most important effort to raise money for the organization. The funds raised from the sale make it possible for Camp Fire to recruit, train and support volunteer club leaders, to maintain summer camp properties and to make it possible for girls and boys to grow and fully enjoy their childhood.

Camp Fire is asking the community at large to support this effort and look for 7,000 smiling faces in the Portland area. "It is possible to eat candy and not feel guilty about it!"

The sale starts Feb. 9 through Feb. 26. This year's selection is Chocolate-covered Cashew Caramel Clusters and Mints.
