Jean Marsey flashes a broad smile and a warm glance as she sits behind her desk at Bess Kaiser Medical Center where she is Personnel Assistant.

A native of Arkansas, Jean came to Portland as a young child. She completed high school at Jefferson and attended Portland State University and Western Business College.

Mrs. Marsey is a people person and enjoys any occupation that allows her to deal with people. Her line of employment reflects this attitude. She worked as a counselor for the downtown YMCA; as a teacher's aide; as a police clerk for the Portland Police Dept. and as the first Black receptionist/agency accountant for Industrial Indemnity.

Mrs. Marsey and family are members of Hughes Memorial D.M.E. Church. Although she is a resident of Vancouver, Washington, Jean journeys to Portland each Sunday and whatever days are necessary to worship and be involved in church activities. Currently, she is chairman of the administrative board of Hughes Memorial and in the past, served as vice president of the United Methodist Women.

Happily married to Mr. Joseph Marsey, they are proud parents of two sons, Joey and David, and a daughter, Debbie.

When asked what she feels is important in selecting and being successful in a career, Jean says, "Before deciding on any career, do extensive research on many. Once you have chosen one, continue to research (it) to find out as much as possible about (that) career choice."

"Once you know what is needed (education, training, financial needs, etc.), set out to accomplish the requirement."

"Be sure that the career you choose is one that you like as well as providing financial stability. Having an aggressive and outgoing, but pleasant, personality is a must. Never step on anyone on your way up."

Jean is one of those rare persons that allows very little to stand in her way when she decides to give a helping hand to someone in need.

She is a Black role model all can be proud of.

Violist, Randall Vemer, will play with the Oregon Symphony Orchestra Sunday, April 15th, 1984, at 3:00 p.m. at Portland Civic Auditorium in a Sunday family concert. Associate Conductor, Norman Leyden will direct the orchestra.
