EDITORIAL/OPINION

Oregon boasts true rainbow

The recent misinformation making the headlines in the mass media is that the Rainbow Coalition glows with only one color.

However, this analysis ignors the limitations of many in white America who refuse to vote for a Black man for president.

They are using the old "blame the victim" strategy that underlies institutional thought in America. It states that poor people are poor because they want to be on welfare, sick people are sick in order to live off the hospitality of the state and affirmative action is reverse racism.

But non-white and low-income people are awake while living through the American dream of inequality, under education and political stagnation. Their collective hope is reflected in the Rainbow Coalition. That sum total is Jesse Jackson.

When the national media looks at Oregon Tuesday, we hope their preconceived notions about the Rainbow Coalition will not hamper their assessment of the hues of colors that support Jesse Jackson.

In Oregon, the Rainbow Coalition shines and if Jackson does not come here it is because he, in spirit, never left. The Coalition can be seen, felt and will survive beyond November. When the national media pauses in Oregon Tuesday, let us show them the true rainbow of commonality and concern. Put their misinformation to rest by voting for the colors of tomorrow. The Rainbow Coalition glows in Oregon.

Balance the scale

The unbalanced scale of Portland's legal profession has again tilted unfairly against Judge Mercedes F. Deiz in last week's Oregonian judicial-performance survey. Three hundred and eleven lawyers gave Deiz the second lowest rating as a Multnomah County Circuit Court Judge.

In a city where you can count the number of Afro-American attorneys on one hand, that impression of Diez is created by a legal profession which still regards the Afro-American as threefifths of a person.

One lawyer stated, "She tries to be a social worker ...and is unable to hide feelings." As citizens, we should rejoice in the knowledge that a human being is on the bench and not merely a legal textbook without the depth of experience that being a Black woman in white America af-

Judge Deiz is of uncommon valor and her compassion for the dispossessed is limitless. If Deiz has no comprehension of law, fairness or integrity, why has no one ever filed to take the bench away from her? It is because they know it would be a downhill fight in a bottomless pit. The people would vote to retain her. Deiz is a people's judge. All we ask when appraising the judicial rating is that you consider the source.

OBSERVER ENDORSEMENTS

NATIONAL OFFICES

JESSE JACKSON

President. Jesse Jackson is clearly our choice-not just because of his excellent stand on so many crucial issues, but also because of the rainbow coalition around his candidacy here in Oregon and the hope it brings for lasting political

MARGIE HENDRIKSEN

United States Senator. The Observer urges readers to vote for Margie Hendriksen. Hendriksen has proven to be a very effective legislative leader while remaining a spokesperson for crucial progressive issues such as affirmative action, comparable worth and progressive

STATE OFFICES

BARBARA ROBERTS

Secretary of State. Barbara Roberts is the clear choice for this important position. Her voting record is similar to her opponent's, but Roberts is distinguished by her willingness to advocate for human needs, exhibited during 20 years at public service.

GRATTAN KERANS

Treasurer. Grattan Kerans is unopposed in the primary. The Observer endorses him because of his continued support for divestment of Oregon State funds from South Africa as proposed by State Representative Jim Hill (D-Salem).

MARGARET CARTER

House District #18 Margaret Carter is the one candidate who can truly represent all of the people in the district. The Observer believes Carter will do an excellent job of articulating the needs of her constituents and of fighting for them when necessary.

ANNE GREENFIELD

House District #19. The Observer urges District 19 readers to vote for Anne Greenfield. Greenfield has proven her commitment through years of community service and, as demonstrated by her endorsement of the Homestead Exemption for property tax relief, will be a thoughtful and courageous representative.

State Senate #8. The Observer makes no endorsement in this race since none of the candidates has proven his ability to represent the diverse interests of the districts constituents. Bill McCoy is widely respected by his colleagues in Salem, but as his opposition to the creation of a Black house district (District 18) and his proposal for a governor's mansion show, he is off track with the wishes of his constituents. Steven McElroy simply doesn't have enough experience and lacks any depth of knowledge on many crucial issues. Wally Priestley's nine terms as a representative show his effectiveness at raising issues, but he lacks significant positive accomplishments. Bill Stevenson, a former State Labor Commissioner and senator, favors too large tax breaks for big business.

CITY AND COUNTY

BUD CLARK

Mayor of Portland. Bud Clark is the easy choice here. Clark's strong support of small business and neighborhood revitalization, along with his willingness to openly solicit creative solutions, would be a refreshing break from the current conservative administration.

MIKE LINDBERG

City Council #1. Mike Lindberg deserves the support of everyone who wants the Council to actively create a city where meaningful jobs are available for all, where neighborhoods retain their unique identity, and where crime is recognized as a social, not just an individual, problem.

CHARLES JORDAN

City Council #3. The Observer endorses Charles Jordan. He is a proven, effective administrator who has fought to make Portland a more livable city by initiating the Neighborhood Mediation Project, Mounted Horse Patrol and Neighborhoods Against Crime programs, among others.

JOE LANE

County Clerk. As County Clerk, Joe Lane will not only professionally manage the Elections Division, he'll do his best to educate non-voters about the election process. The Observer endorses Joe Lane.

JUDICIAL CANDIDATES

JUDITH BAUMAN

District Court, Dept. 2. The Observer endorses Judith Bauman. Bauman's experience as a Deputy District Attorney/Prosecutor, her commitment to improving the legal system and ability to communicate widely make her well qualified to be a District Court Judge.

ROOSEVELT ROBINSON

Circuit Court, Dept. 5. The Observer endorses Roosevelt Robinson. His legal experience, tough stand on crime combined with support for funding creative alternatives to jail sentences and his pledge to go into the schools to speak about crime and the legal system, make him the obvious

AARON BROWN, JR.

District Court, Dept. 8. Aaron Brown, Jr., is the candidate endorsed by the Observer for this position. During 14 years in judicial service, he has demonstrated a no-nonsense approach and the crucial ability to communicate well with a variety of

MERCEDES DEIZ

Circuit Court, Dept. 18. Since 1970, Mercedes Deiz has been a competent, fair judge with the integrity to stand behind her concern for our city's youth. The Observer thinks she has earned our support.

BALLOT MEASURES

#1. The Observer recommends a "no" vote on ballot measure one. Although some public works are needed, money raised with bonds approved by this measure would primarily benefit rural areas and there is no guarantee the public works would create jobs for those most needy.

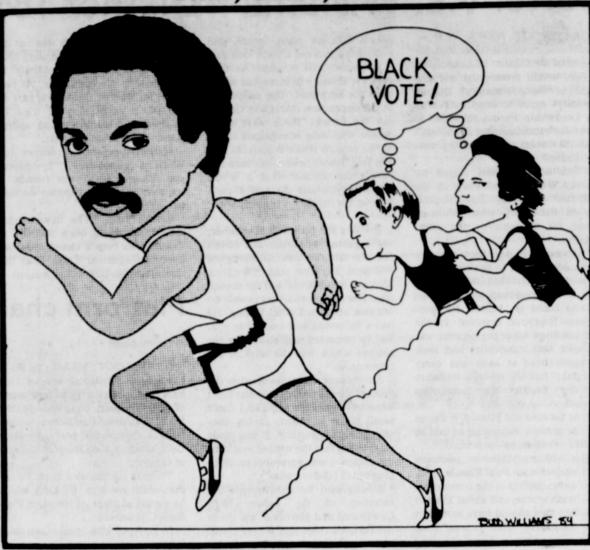

#2. A "no" vote is recommended here. Fees for motor vehicles should be based on weight since heavier cars damage roads the most and increasing fees at a flat rate is discriminatory to low-income

#3. A "yes" vote for number three is important for the future. A good library system is crucial for quality education and an informed voting

#4. The agency running public libraries should be accountable to the public and this measure will do that. The Observer recommends a "yes" vote.

#5. A "no" vote is recommended on this measure by the Observer. The vast majority of this money will go for more jail beds. The miniscule rehabilitation program funding is offered as a carrot to progressive voters rather than representing a change of emphasis.
