

Divestment by Unitarians

BOSTON — The Board of Trustees of the Unitarian Universalist Association of congregations voted without dissent Sunday, April 21, to sell stocks of companies which do one percent or more of their business in South Africa, or which do not adhere to the Sullivan Principles of equal treatment for all.

The anti-apartheid guideline, effective immediately, provides that such stocks will be sold within six months, although the Association can retain sufficient stock (currently $1,000 worth under Federal regulations) to "enable shareholder advocacy activities."

The Unitarian Universalists investment policy guideline "condemns the moral and ethical wrongs expressed in the apartheid policies of the South African government."

Robert T. Lavender, Financial Advisor to the Board and a trustee from Darien, Connecticut, said the impact on the denomination's portfolio of stocks was not fully known but that it would require the sale of some holdings.

The association has a long history of actions and statements against apartheid. Among its lay leaders who have spoken out against apartheid was the late Whitney Young of the Urban League.

More recently, the association's president, the Rev. Dr. Eugene Pickett, was arrested Feb. 21, for demonstrating outside the South African Embassy in Washington.
