Forestry Center holds classes

Adults and youths, ages 15 and up, can explore trees of Northwestern Oregon in a Forestry Center class on Tuesday, August 6 and 13. The two-session evening class will provide introductory, nontechnical information on local trees. The first session will cover the use of tree classification keys, terminology for describing distinctive features of trees, and a review of local trees.

The second session will include a hike through adjacent Hoyt Arboretum to view trees and become familiar with variations in tree form, leaf size, fruits, twig structure and bark texture. Participants should wear weather-wise clothing, bring illustrated field guides if desired, and a lunch. The class is scheduled for August 6 and 13, from 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. in Miller Hall classroom. Cost is $10 WFC members and $12 for others. For information contact the Forestry Center, 4033 S.W. Canyon Rd., Portland, 228-1367.

United Negro College Fund

The United Negro College Fund was founded in 1944 with a campaign directed at the community to encourage them to give financial support to private Black colleges. Now, 41 years later, the need for finances is still present. The importance of Black colleges cannot be overstated. They are responsible for the education of over one-half of our Black leaders today. Dr. Martin Luther King, our Black leader, who through his life and death gave us the civil rights we enjoy today, was a 1948 Morehouse College graduate. It is with Dr. King's legacy that Black men and women strive to make a better world for all their brothers and sisters. Black colleges are a reminder to us that at one time in our Black history we did not have access to institutions of higher learning, so we had to build our own.

It was this profound reminder that prompted a small, but committed group of people to meet on July 1 at the Sylvan Learning Center to discuss the reactivation of Portland's UNCF's executive board. The group discussed various methods to implement the board's re-entrance into the community. It was decided that a list should be compiled of all the city's Black organizations to assist in securing representatives to serve on the new board. The need for more regular meetings to reiterate the importance of keeping the 42 Black colleges open was identified as a high priority.

Plans are in the making for the first weekend in September to be designated as UNCF weekend. A kickoff breakfast will be held that Saturday, and Sunday will be dedicated to UNCF in all the community churches. The Portland group is aiming to get more support throughout the entire year which will culminate in the annual UNCF "Parade of Stars" telethon to be telecast in late December. Anyone interested in helping Portland's UNCF to meet its goal is invited to attend the next meeting on July 15, Monday at 7:30 p.m. The meeting will be at the Sylvan Learning Center, 4300 N.E. Fremont Ave. All ideas and suggestions will be appreciated.

Attention:

invited. Bring own table service, beverage, main dish, AND salad OR dessert. Contact Doug Wirt, 288-5173, or Greg and Heather, Vancouver 695-9266.

"People are Beautiful"

The "People are Beautiful" children's program (P.A.B.) will be celebrating 10 years of service to the north and northeast Portland area this summer. The Ecumenical Parish, sponsors of "People are Beautiful" for the past 10 years, will mark the day with a Block Party and a rib dinner in the Mallory Avenue Christian Church parking lot, 126 N.E. Alberta, on July 27.

Fred Meyer "Friends to the Elderly"

The Fred Meyer Charitable Trust has awarded a grant in the amount of $126,200 to fund a pilot project which will provide in-home services to the elderly by community volunteers. The new Portland area project called "Friends to the Elderly" will begin in early September, 1985, at no charge to its participants.

This project is unique in that three social service agencies, Catholic Family Services, Jewish Family and Child Services and Lutheran Family Service began working together a year ago to develop and plan this program which will provide services within the greater Portland area.

The primary goals are to assist elderly individuals to remain in their homes with independence and dignity for as long as possible and to establish friendships between trained volunteers and elderly people who meet the program's criteria. Persons requiring these services will be either self-referred or referred by community sources.

Volunteers will be recruited from the community at large. They will be screened and trained by professionals and will provide a variety of services including advocacy, family respite, personal needs and transportation.

Salvation Army pick-ups

The Salvation Army has an immediate need for reusable large appliances and furniture. Portland-area residents who have these reusable and repairable items can call the Salvation Army at 235-4192 for convenient, at-home pick-ups. Salvation Army trucks are in the Portland area Monday through Friday, between 8:00 a.m. and 4:00 p.m.

Items donated to the Salvation Army are sorted and repaired by persons with substance-abuse or emotional problems who are receiving treatment at the organization's Adult Rehabilitation Center (A.R.C.), located in Portland.

The A.R.C. provides physical, social, and spiritual assistance on a residential basis for a minimum of 90 days.

Donated goods are sold in area Thrift Stores, the proceeds of which fund the A.R.C. itself.
