Religion Under Attack - Part I

Are churches under attack? is a question that has crossed the minds of nearly every U.S. citizen who is old enough to read and comprehend the voice of the news media today.

With Part I of "Religion Under Attack," we will introduce the church, its leaders and their current or past positions with the church and the government. "It is becoming increasingly evident that we are experiencing an alarming anti-religious sentiment in America today. It is being most vividly reflected in the activities and abuses by government agencies such as the IRS, but also in the courts and legislatures. It is taking many forms: churches are being forced to spend large portions of their precious church assets to defend themselves in costly litigation with government; massive intrusions into the internal affairs of churches are taking place in the name of proving exemptions; churches are being excluded from redevelopment plans in major cities; there are countless efforts to remove all vestiges of religious images such as "In God We Trust"; churches are now being forced to pay Social Security employment tax; religious groups are denied the opportunity to use public buildings in a manner equal to other community groups; churches are being padlocked because the state does not agree with their ministry; and, worst of all, ministers are being jailed for carrying out the good faith beliefs of their church."

The Church of Scientology was taken to court for $39 million to defend its religion from a fraud judgment accused by Portland woman, Julie Christofferson Titchbourne. The suit originated 10 years ago when Julie filed and won a $2,067,000.20 judgment against the Church and L. Ron Hubbard, founder of Scientology and its religious philosophy. However, the judgment was overturned.

The Rev. Sun Myung Moon, founder of the Unification Church was sentenced to 18 months in a federal prison for tax evasion and released Thursday, July 4, Independence Day, to a halfway house in Brooklyn after serving 11 months of his 18-month sentence.

Faith Baptist Church in Louisville, Nebraska, was raided by the city police, removing more than 60 members of the congregation from their early-morning service Oct. 18, 1982. Faith Christian School was said to be illegal due to non-certified teachers and non-certification of the school. State certification is a requirement of all primary and secondary schools in the state of Nebraska.

Rev. Everett Sileven, pastor of Faith Baptist, and members were ordered to be imprisoned.
NEWPORT, Utah, June 22 — About 140 state police officers and social service workers raided 30 homes and took into custody 112 children of the Northeast Kingdom Community Church because members had refused to answer complaints about child abuse and neglect.
