Administrative Officer

One of the nation's most respected professional associations offers an excellent opportunity for a dedicated Administrative Officer to perform and supervise specific assignments and ad hoc projects for our education accreditation committee.

As the accrediting council's appeals hearing officer, you'll utilize your familiarity with appeals procedures and exceptions to supervise hearing arrangements, review cases with legal counsel and committees, formulate strategies, brief members and advise them during hearings. You will prepare report analysis necessary for the accreditation process and perform research studies supporting accreditation policy decisions, as well as answer inquiries and supervise meeting arrangements.

Requirements include a Master's or Doctoral degree, preferably in Social Science or Health Care and extensive administrative experience. Knowledge of appeals and due process is a definite plus. Your superior interpersonal and communication skills, plus your abilities as a third party administrator, qualify you for this challenging position.
