

"Winners" Win Community Team Challenges III

Even though the weather was cool, Delta Park was hot last Saturday as 6 teams competed against each other at the third annual Community Team Challenges.

After the dust settled, five hours and ten events later, Dr. Edward Ward's "Winners" held up to their name as the team captured top honors. Second place went to Albina Youth Opportunity School (AYOS) and the Urban League took the third place title. Other teams who competed included the Ebony Rose Ski Club, Videomania, and the P.O. Raiders.

Von Ray Johnson, team captain of the "Winners" was successful in pulling together another outstanding team, winning for the second year in a row. The team placed 1st and 2nd in 7 out of 10 events. A.Y.O.S., led by captain Wendy Freeman, ran neck and neck with the Urban League to take second place.

In addition to the egg toss, sack race, relays, football, and obstacle course, two new events were included this year: the "Hot Shot" basketball game, and volleyball. Dennis Carline of the P.O. Raiders scored a high of 55 points in the Hot Shot competition, followed by Sandra Jackson of the Urban League team, and Lisa Channel of the Winners, both scoring 45 points apiece.

Rose City Connection, organizers and producers of the event felt that this year's Challenge competition was a great success. According to Charles Stoudamire, RCC member and head official, "the teams were really prepared, and there was some outstanding talent displayed on all of the teams this year."

Proceeds from the event go to build the organization's scholarship fund. Their goal is to raise $5,000 by the end of 1986. Other sponsors of the Challenges were Nike, Inc., Miller Brands, Inc., American Red Cross, Portland Bottling Company, 7-Up and Rogers Cablesystems.

Danger to Pets Fireworks Can Be No Picnic For Your Pet

When fireworks explode, many dogs panic and may crawl under something to hide, shaking with fear. Others may choke themselves to death in their own backyard as they struggle against their chain to escape the terror of the sound; or they may bolt through the window or locked screen door and run great distances only to drop exhausted, confused and lost.

Here are some tips for owners to protect their pets during the July 4th week:

1. Never leave the pet alone during a fireworks display or allow the pet around neighborhood fireworks bursts. The best place for the pet is inside the house where the owner can provide comfort and security.
2. Make sure the pet wears a buckle-type collar or harness with a current license so the pet can be returned easily to the owner, if it does run in panic. This is vital for pets which "never leave the house" also.
3. Pets with a known history of sound-shyness can often benefit from tranquilizers from a veterinarian.

If a pet does become lost during the holiday excitement, the owner should look for it immediately in the neighborhood. Signs should be posted in the area and the owner should visit the animal shelter in Troutdale the next day. Keep looking because often pets will still be trying to get home for weeks.

Non-pet owners can extend their humaneness toward animals by curtailing their use of fireworks if it is obviously causing distress for an animal. It is an excellent time for parents to discuss with their children that kindness to animals includes being thoughtful about fireworks.
