Out of control drug dealing in their neighborhoods was the message interim Police Chief Robert M. Tobin got from residents of Northeast Portland. Tobin, meeting with the Greater Northeast Police Council, said "We'll take the resources we've got, and we will have some effect" to fight drugs and other forms of street crime.

Finance is Top Priority of Oregon Small Business

by Jerry Garner

Finance will be the number one issue concerning Oregon delegates to the National White House Conference on Small Business to be held in Washington, D.C., August 17-21, 1986.

The White House Conference on Small Businesses held an open forum in May, here in Portland to discuss problems facing small businesses in Oregon. Among the topics discussed at the Conference were liability insurance, payroll costs, taxation, finance and capital formation, procurement and innovation, entrepreneurial training and education. The problem of finance emerged as the number one issue of the 14 Oregon delegate members who will attend the National Conference in Washington.

John H. Brown, President of Brofam Enterprises, who was a delegate candidate during the Portland conference, said finance is the number one concern facing small businesses. "The federal government should act to reduce front-end costs and excessive regulation of the interstate security financing by small business through the adoption of uniform standards applicable to all states. Presently, there is no uniform standards for interstate security financing for small business."

The Oregon delegates recommended that capital formation by small businesses should be encouraged through tax incentives such as a lower capital gains rate, graduated tax rates for business profits up to $150,000, and by retention of current pension rules for I.R.A.s, Keoghs, corporate plans and 401(K)s.

The delegates also recommended changes in taxation, payroll costs, regulation and paperwork, promotion of small business education training, and the establishment of a cabinet-level Department of Trade.
