Clarence Williams III

Although he is remembered for his hit TV series "The Mod Squad," Clarence Williams III has given current credence to his talents playing the role of the father in pop-star Prince's award-winning motion picture, "Purple Rain." Williams, who was born in Harlem, made his Broadway debut in "The Long Dream." His other stage appearances include: "Double Take," "The Great Indoors," Shakespeare's "King John," and the 1964 play that established him in New York theatre, "Slow Dance On The Killing Ground." Williams was chosen for the 1968 premier of "The Mod Squad" after being recommended by his good friend Bill Cosby and appearing in a Danny Thomas special, which served as a screen test for the TV series. The series lasted for five seasons. His other TV appearances include: The Hero Who Couldn't Read, "Hill Street Blues" and "T.J. Hooker."
