

Salom Njunua (R) with his trainer Cloria Ojeda critique a video tape made during a mock job interview. The Private Industrial Council as part of its pre-employment training video tapes all applicants so they can see how they react to the interviewers questions. Some of the training options offered at the PIC are vocational training, basic skills training and Job Club. Photo by Richard J. Brown

New PIC to Train Thousands

The newly formed Private Industry Council is planning on providing vocational skills training, basic skills training, customized training, on-the-job training, and pre-employment and job search training from approximately 3,000 youth and adults who face significant barriers to employment.

The training plan was contained in a draft submitted by the PIC to the State of Oregon Job Training Partnership Administration. The new PIC is authorized to develop and administer Federal Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA) training programs for residents of the City of Portland, Multnomah County and Washington County, beginning July 1, 1987, through June 30, 1988. Funding for the training will total $5,404,110.