ALASKA PACIFIC UNIVERSITY PRESIDENT

Alaska Pacific University, formerly Alaska Methodist University, is seeking a new President to provide continuity and growth for Alaska's only private four-year university. This university based on Judeo-Christian precepts, provides an integrated liberal arts curriculum with a unique core, areas of concentration, and career clusters. It presently serves a growing student body of about 600 students on incomparably beautiful 170 acre campus in the center of Anchorage, the largest city in the State of Alaska. It offers BA, MLA, MSM and MAT degrees, is international and interreligious in context, faculty, and student body, and is supported by a substantial multimillion dollar endowment. The retiring President has revised and redirected the institution with a unique philosophy and curriculum unfettered by tradition. Without tenure, traditional department, and majors, the university provides a fresh blending of liberal learning and the world of work, combining theory and practice which bridges the Atlantic and Pacific cultures. The Board of Trustees seeks a strong leader committed to this direction and mission. The foundation is laid and tools are available to inspire the best to fulfill the promise of the next phase of development built on academic excellence. Salary is open to excellent. The professional staff is strong and supportive, and there is a new President's home on campus. Demonstrated leadership in private higher education is preferred as is actual experience in integrated and value-oriented education. The search process begins immediately, and the committee hopes for an early decision. Applications and nominations should be sent to: Chair, Search Committee, Office of the President, Alaska Pacific University, 4101 University Drive, Anchorage, AK 99508. Alaska Pacific University is an EO/AA Employer.
