

The Helping Hand That is Your Own

On behalf of the board of directors of the Black United Fund of Oregon (BUFO) I want to express our sincere appreciation to everyone who invested their resources in the form of ideas, skills, energy, materials, time and money to make the BUFO's 1987 fundraising campaign a successful one.

The contributions from the employees at Portland Public Schools, St. Andrew's Legal Clinic, Portland Community College, IBM Corporation, N/NE Community Mental Health Clinic, and Tri-Met are especially important to us because the BUFO has worked very hard to gain equal access to workplace solicitation, in an effort to provide employees with more charitable giving options at their workplace.

Your contribution demonstrates your commitment to self-help through self-investment and your willingness to assist those less fortunate than you are.

We also want to acknowledge Delta Sigma Theta Sorority for their generous contribution and the Oregon Alliance of Black School Educators for their support. In truth, the BUFO could not have survived its critical first year had it not been for the help received from many places.

The successful inclusion of the BUFO in the marketplace of private sector and government employees has had, and will continue to have, a dramatic impact on our ability to provide meaningful and tangible support for a wide range of programs that otherwise would receive little or no funding.

If the BUFO is to have the impact that our challenge demands and the importance that our mission deserves, we cannot remain Oregon's best kept secret. We therefore ask that you share your knowledge and support of the BUFO with others.

Encouraging the community at every economic level to contribute a small portion of their resources to support community programs is a critical step in moving the Black community towards social and economic self-sufficiency.

We believe that the BUFO and this form of self-investment will help break the cycle and pattern of economic dependency and social powerlessness that have characterized Black organizations and communities.

As we begin our second year, we hope that you are as proud of us as we are of you.

Randall Robinson at PSU

Randall Robinson, a staunch advocate of human rights who is credited with turning the plight of Black South Africans into one of the hottest foreign policy issues in America, will present a free public talk on "Divestiture As a Tool For Political, Economic and Social Change in South Africa," Friday, Feb. 5, at 12 noon in the Smith Center third-floor ballroom at Portland State University (S.W. Broadway between Montgomery and Harrison Sts.).

Robinson, who is executive director of TransAfrica, an American lobbying organization for Africa and the Caribbean, is regarded as a highly visible American spokesman against current South African apartheid policies.

As a young Harvard Law School graduate, Robinson first became active in the Southern African Relief Fund, which raised money for groups fighting the Pretoria Government. After working in Tanzania as a Ford Foundation fellow, he returned to Boston and worked for several years as a public interest lawyer. In 1975, Robinson journeyed to Washington, D.C., where he worked as an aide to two U.S. representatives.

Robinson — whose brother is Max Robinson, former anchor at ABC Television News — has had articles published in several leading publications including The New York Times, The Boston Globe and The Washington Post newspapers as well as Ebony, Black Scholar and Essence magazines.

He has been honored for his achievements with the Martin Luther King, Jr. Distinguished Service Award, the Johnson Publishing Company American Black Achievement Award, the Congressional Black Caucus Humanitarian Award and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference Drum Major for Justice Award, among others.

Robinson is also a member of the board of trustees at Hampton Institute, is a member of the Council of Foreign Relations, a member of the Calvert Social Investment Fund Advisory Council, a co-founder of the Free South Africa Movement and a member of the Massachusetts State Bar Association.

His appearance at PSU is sponsored by PSU's Black Cultural Affairs Board.
