NATIONAL LABOR & ECONOMICS

Median earnings of black married-couple families were 86% of the median for white married couples, the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics reports.

About 52.2 million families had an employed member in the second quarter of 1988, 300,000 more than in the same quarter a year earlier. Median family earnings also continued to move up, rising 4.4 percent to $597 a week. Other highlights in the second quarter of 1988 were:

Over 90% of the families with employed members had at least one full-time worker — 48.4 million in all — 400,000 more than a year earlier. The number with no member in the labor force also rose, but, in three-fifths of these families, all members were 60 years old or over.

The number of families with unemployed members fell by 800,000 to just under 5 million; in 72 percent of these families, there was an employed member. Families maintained by women—about 16% of all U.S. families—comprised 47% of those with unemployment and no employed members.

The number of families in which both the husband and wife were employed jumped by 660,000 to reach 24.9 million, or half of all married-couple families. All of the gain was among families with no children under 18. The number of families with children and both parents working remained unchanged at 14 million.

Median wage and salary earnings of two-worker families were about double those of one-worker families. The earnings of married-couple families were much higher than those of families maintained by women or men. Over the year, the earnings of married-couple families increased by 4.5 percent while earnings of the other two groups grew by 5.4% and 5.6%, respectively.

The median for Hispanic married couples was 72% of that for whites, partly because there are relatively fewer multi-earner families among Hispanics.

FAMILY OF THE WEEK

In the Black community, single, African-American mothers are not often recognized for their contributions to the positive growth and development of their sons and daughters. So, this week, the Portland Observer is saluting the family of Darwin Raydell Eagleton and his mother, Deloice V. Williams.

Influenced by his mother, Darwin has become one of the top-rated, young, African-American musicians in America. Said Deloice, "Darwin's interest in music was overwhelming from the time he was nine months old. Each birthday and Christmas, I bought him an instrument and simply said play."

And play he has: The Jazmin Marching Band, the Civic Band, the Spartans' Drum and Bugle Corps, Jefferson High School band and on and on. When Jazz great Clark Terry came to Portland, in 1984, for a memorial for the late Sonny King, he was so impressed with Darwin's playing that he paid for Darwin to attend a summer Jazz camp at Emporia State University in Kansas. At the end of the camp, Darwin received the "Outstanding Musician" Award.

In 1985, Darwin was chosen as one of the outstanding instrumentalists in the country and was invited to participate in the 1985 American Musical Ambassadors European band tour. In 1984, Darwin was honored with the Instrumentalist Magazine Musicianship Award. Darwin won the award again in 1985. Later, he was inducted into the Junior All-American Hall of Fame in recognition of outstanding musical dedication and service.

A student at Mt. Hood Community College, Darwin has a 3.69 grade point average and is a member of the Marauders Drum Corps. This year, the Corp has visited over 20 states in 45 days and competed in 26 contests.

A loving, determined family, Darwin and Deloice are very high on each other. Said Deloice, "Darwin is going to make it. We depend on each other for strength, something we'll be doing forever."

May Darwin and Deloice be an inspiration to other families throughout the City of Portland.
