Black history Calendar 1989

Hartford, Conn., November 15 - The next time you check the calendar to see what day it is, you might find yourself learning something. The 1989 Calendar of Black History, now available from Aetna Life & Casualty, features daily highlights of significant events in black history and monthly profiles of black achievers.

Produced as a public service by Aetna since 1982, the calendars have been a "mini-course" in American black history. Every day, a political, educational, cultural or sporting fact offers insight into many famous (and not-so-famous) individuals and historical developments. For example, many sports enthusiasts know Joe Louis received the World Heavyweight title on June 25, 1948, but most people don't know one of the first protest marches occurred back in 1917. On July 28 of that year, thousands walked in silence down New York City's Fifth Avenue denouncing lynchings and racial inequalities.

The monthly profiles feature selected individuals whose accomplishments are especially notable, including: Marcus Garvey, organizer of the "Back to Africa" campaign; Meta Vaux Warrick Fuller, internationally acclaimed sculptor; and Thomas Greene Bethune, a musical prodigy, despite his blindness.

Other individuals profiled include: Henry O. Flipper, the first black graduate of West Point; Richard Robert Wright, Educator and Banker; Blanch Kelso Bruce, U.S. Senator; Charlotte Hawkins Brown, educator and humanitarian; Patricia Roberts Harris, lawyer, educator and U.N. Delegate; Billie Holiday, jazz singer; Tom Molineaux, the first American heavyweight contender; Francis Watkins Harper, poet, author and lecturer; and Elijah McCoy, inventor. Each profile is illustrated by artist Tom McKinney.

A Philadelphia native, McKinney's paintings have appeared on such popular television series as "The Cosby Show," "growing Pains" and "Busting Loose." Says McKinney of the project, "It's vital that every American - especially our children - has a chance to see and read about people and events that have shaped this country's history." McKinney's work is especially vibrant due to the 5-color printing process used in production. Previous calendars have been black and white.

The 16" x 12" calendar can be obtained by mailing a check (payable to Aetna Life & Casualty) for $2.00 to BLACK HISTORY CALENDAR, Aetna Life & Casualty, 151 Farmington Avenue - RWAC, Hartford, Connecticut, 06156.

BURN THIS AD.

That's what many families would have to resort to this winter just to stay warm. If it wasn't for Project Help.

Year after year, your donations have provided emergency fuel assistance for thousands of people caught without heat. Like the elderly. The handicapped. And the unemployed.

This winter, they need your contribution once again. It's tax deductible and simple to give. Just look for a Project Help donation envelope in your next electric bill.

Beginning in January, your gift, plus $100,000 from Pacific Power and PGE shareholders, will be disbursed by the Salvation Army to buy oil, wood, gas or electricity for needy families in your community.

So, please give as you're able. With your help, this ad can generate heat. Without going up in smoke.
