

Why We Honor Martin Luther King Jr.

Between 1955 and 1968, Martin Luther King Jr.'s dedication to the Civil Rights Movement helped to change America. He brought to the country's attention the unfair and unjust treatment of oppressed peoples.

He had the help of millions of Americans; but it was his strong leadership abilities that gave people the faith and courage to work non-violently and to strive for understanding and peace.

His leadership led to new laws that would help to reaffirm the American ideals of freedom, justice and opportunity for all.

Americans will remember, always, the work of Martin Luther King Jr., born January 15, 1929. Each year on the third Monday in January we will celebrate his life and continue to honor
