BLACK FILMMAKERS HALL OF FAME INDUCTS LOLA FALANA AND DANCE GREAT ALVIN AILEY

OAKLAND, CA -- The Black Filmmakers Hall of Fame celebrated its 16th anniversary by inducting the legendary choreographer, Alvin Ailey and the versatile dancer, singer and actress, Lola Falana. This year's program was hosted by choreographer and television star Debbie Allen and the noted film actor and dancer, Gregory Hines. Ms. Allen is currently directing the hit television series, "A Different World" and Gregory is starring in the current screen smash, "Tap."

The two day celebration, held annually in Oakland, featured a gala dinner hosted by dancer/choreographers Geoffrey Holder and Carmen de Lavallade. The Sunday induction ceremonies' theme was "Moveable Images, Black Music and Dance in Film."

Each year, the Black Filmmakers Hall of Fame inducts noted performers who have developed an outstanding body of work in some aspect of the film or electronic image (television). In addition to Ms. Falana, and Alvin Ailey, the legendary African-American star of British musical films of the 1930's,

Elizabeth Welch, was also inducted into the Hall of Fame. Jeasmine Guy, the star of "A Different World" television series was given the Clarence Muse Award in recognition of her success as one of the brightest young stars of today. The famous Nicholas Brothers were also honored for their innovative and pioneering efforts in dance for the silver screen.

The Black filmmakers organization was formed sixteen years ago to acknowledge not only the contributions of African-American performers but to preserve those screen images in a permanent archive and museum. One corporation who has recognized the value of the organization's efforts has been

AT&T. The world communications leader has provided various types of support to the group's efforts. They underwrote the Black Filmmakers fundraising dinner last month and will be a major sponsor of the national telecast of the "Black Filmmakers Awards Show" and presentation ceremonies slated for telecast early this summer.

AT&T's total commitment this year will be close to $200,000. AT&T has a special interest in the historical development of film because it was through the work of its scientists and engineers, that motion picture sound was first made possible, over sixty years ago.

NEW GARDENS BROCHURE

Finally! A guide to Portland Area Gardens. Published by the Association of Oregon Gardens, the long-awaited guide features 17 garden sites in and around Portland, four of which are part of the Bureau of Parks and Recreation.

The Association of Oregon Gardens, a non-profit support group for public gardens since 1984, serves as an education network for managers of specialty gardens. Its new guide provides highlights of Portland's varied horticultural offerings, and fills a void that could not be filled by any one garden agency.

Park Bureau Gardens in the guide include Leach Botanical Garden, Crystal Springs Rhododendron Garden, Hoyt Arboretum, and the International Rose Test in Washington Park. Rose Gardens at Peninsula Park and Ladds Addition are also mentioned in the Rose Test Garden listing.

The new guide is available for $1 at area gardens, or through the Bureau of Parks and Recreation, 1120 SW 5th Portland, OR 97204. 796-5193.
