Scientology Prishioners Donate Books To 19 Portland Libraries

Parishioners of the Church of Scientology are engaged in a project to provide Portland libraries with reference books on the applied philosophy of Scientology and other non-fiction works of acclaimed author L. Ron Hubbard. The writings are valued at over $2,700.

A total of 19 libraries are scheduled to receive the books by the end of February according to church spokesperson, Angie Johnson, and are being purchased through parishioner donations.

"The fruits of wisdom are traditionally found in religion and this is our contribution to making our libraries complete resources for evryone," stated Johnson. "We're very proud to make this contribution."

PORTLAND SCHOOL BOARD -- WE NEED NEW BLOOD! DIVERSITY! POWER!

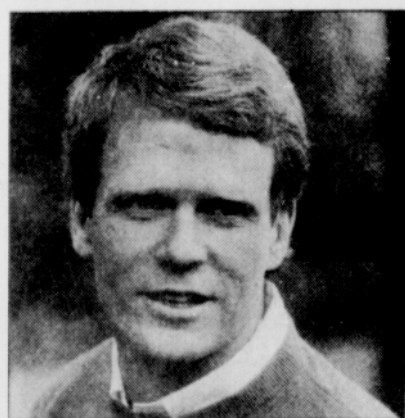

It's time for a new school board. The February 4th school boycott and the board's refusal to adopt the community's education plan have created a crisis of confidence in the current board. Parents and other citizens have no reason to believe that the present board will be responsive to their concerns. This crisis presents the opportunity for some highly qualified, committed community activists for make a run for the all-volunteer board.

The Portland Rainbow Coalition finds these candidates supportive of the community's education plan and committed to citizen empowerment in creating schools of excellence. We recommend that voters mark their ballots for all the following candidates.

ROBERTO REYES-COLON - zone #1

With the slogan "Education for the Global Village", Reyes-Colon would bring fifteen years of experience as an educator and civil/human rights advocate to the school board. A Puerto Rican educated in New York and Portland, his work in creating bi-lingual school programs, as a fair housing specialist, administering immigration assistance, and as a congressional aide promise active community representation.

ROBY ROBERTS - zone #2

As a former teacher, congressional aide, union representative and student mentor, Roberts brings a particular concern for quality education for all children. His program of reform would focus on the needs of low-income and minority children, eliminate tracking, establish building management teams, treat parents as partners, reduce classroom size, and expand involvement of business, higher education and government in mentoring and curriculum development.

ROBERT PHILLIPS - zone #4

Coming to this race with a broad range of experience in community based organizations, Phillips is past President of the Portland NAACP, chair of Oregon's Association of Black Social Workers, and is currently the affirmative action officer for Multnomah County. He has served on the Tri-county Literacy Council and helped establish the NAACP's Humboldt School mentorship program. "Portland needs an honest, open and responsive school board that is committed to eliminating academic differences between children as well as being committed to involving parents directly in their children's education," says Phillips.

STEVEN LOEWEN - zone #6

A former director of Portland's Child Care Coordinating Council, Loewen has served on local school advisory councils, budget council, Schools for the City and the Echo Theater board. He believes the "current school board members have displayed an incredible disregard and arrogance for public input on all issues." Loewen advocates a return to neighborhood schools and reduced classroom sizes.

JOSEPH TAM - zone #7

Advocating excellence, diversity, and partnership, Tam has experience as a civil rights investigator, as president of "Advocates for Language Learning" and as chair of his local school advisory committee. A native of Hong Kong, he emphasizes that the "new basics" for the 21st century workplace include world languages, multicultural awareness, critical thinking, computer literacy, arts, science, music as well as reading, writing and math.

HAROLD WILLIAMS
COMMUNITY COLLEGE - zone #2

Currently chair of the Coalition of Black Men, Williams is a businessman and a college instructor in political science. He has been affirmative action director for the State of Oregon. Early in his career, Williams organized and directed a storefront campus for Portland State University.

Vice President Quayle to Play in Bryant Gumbel/Walt Disney World Pro-Am Tournament for United Negro College Fund

THUMBS UP FOR CHARITY DRIVE—NBC-News "Today" anchor Bryant Gumbel has an excellent "driver" in Vice President Dan Quayle, who will again contribute his golfing prowess to the second Bryant Gumbel/Walt Disney World Pro-Am, a fund raiser "par excellence" for the United Negro College Fund. Now a two-day event, October 20-21, the tourney hopes to surpass last year's $200,000 total with help from such celebrity golfers as baseball Hall-of-Famer Joe DiMaggio, NBC-News anchor Tom Brokaw, NBA legends Oscar Robertson and Julius Erving, and entertainer Glen Campbell. (Copyright 1990, The Walt Disney Co.)

Lake Buena Vista, FL—Vice President Dan Quayle leads a blue-ribbon list of celebrity golfers participating in the second Bryant Gumbel/Walt Disney World Pro-Am Tournament to benefit the forty-one-member schools of the United Negro College Fund.

With a goal of surpassing the inaugural event's two hundred thousand dollars ($200,000) raised for UNCF, Gumbel and the Vice President will be joined by such notables as baseball Hall-of-Famer Joe DiMaggio, NBA greats Oscar Robertson and Julius Erving, tennis superstar Arthur Ashe, Congressman Dan Rostenkowski (chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee), entertainer Glen Campbell and NBC News colleagues Tom Brokaw and Joe Garagiola.

Other celebrities on the Bryant Gumbel/Walt Disney World Pro-Am roster include such well-known sportsmen and good sports as former NBA star Bob Lanier, Olympic hockey-gold-medalist Mike Eruzione, former New York Mets manager Davey Johnson, entertainer B. J. Thomas, former Miami Dolphin Dick Anderson and Harlem Globetrotter alumnus Curly Neal.

This year's event has expanded to two days of final play in the $1 million-Walt Disney World/Oldsmobile Golf Classic were available for a $2,500 contribution of UNCF.
