10,000 Black Workers May Be Eligible To Share In $40 Million Northwest Airlines Settlement

As many as 10,000 black employees, former employees and job applicants at Northwest Airlines are eligible to share in an estimated $40 million settlement of a class action race discrimination lawsuit against the company.

Under terms of the settlement granted final approval by U.S. District Court Chief Judge Donald D. Alsop in St. Paul, Minn. earlier this month, Northwest agreed to provide a hearing process for black employees, former employees and job applicants to assert their claims at no cost to those asserting such claims.

Northwest also agreed to set aside approximately $3.5 million over the next five years to enhance hiring and promotion opportunities for black employees and to pay $535,000 to 28 name plaintiffs in the case plus job and promotions.

"Black persons who believe that they suffered discrimination in hiring, promotion or termination at Northwest between September 1, 1987 and August 16, 1991 should call 1-800-648-2388 if calling from outside Minnesota or (612) 871-2388 if calling from Minnesota," said Paul Sprenger, lead counsel for plaintiffs in the class action lawsuit and partner in the Washington, D.C. and Minneapolis law firm of Sprenger & Lang. "Those who call to assert a claim will be sent a claim form and will be represented at a hearing by Sprenger & Lang at absolutely no cost to the individual filing the claim. Claims must be filed no later than October 15, 1991."

Sprenger said all legal fees and expenses incurred by Sprenger & Lang in representing those filing claims will be paid by Northwest Airlines.

"It is very significant that there is no cap on the amount of money and job relief for class members," said Sprenger. If just a fraction of the potential claimants actually file claims and receive awards at the same level as the 38 name plaintiffs, approximately $20 million will be awarded. Furthermore, if Northwest comes close to meeting its hiring goals, another $14 million will go to the class through jobs that would otherwise have gone to non-blacks.

The class action suit that resulted in this settlement was filed in mid-1989 and alleged Northwest's hiring, promotion and termination practices discriminated against black job applicants and employees nationwide.

In agreeing to a consent decree to settle the case, Northwest expressly denied any unlawful conduct, but said the settlement is a fair and reasonable resolution of the race discrimination issues raised in the case and that it ends what otherwise would have been protracted and expensive legal proceedings.

Amos Allen looks to get away from Greg West at the Unity Basketball Classic.

The week-long Unity Basketball Classic ended Saturday with the Clippers sponsored by Geneva's Shear Perfection, coming away with the win over the Las Vegas Runners, sponsored by Brown and Hankins.

The basketball tournament took place last week with the theme "Unity," for Afro-Americans.

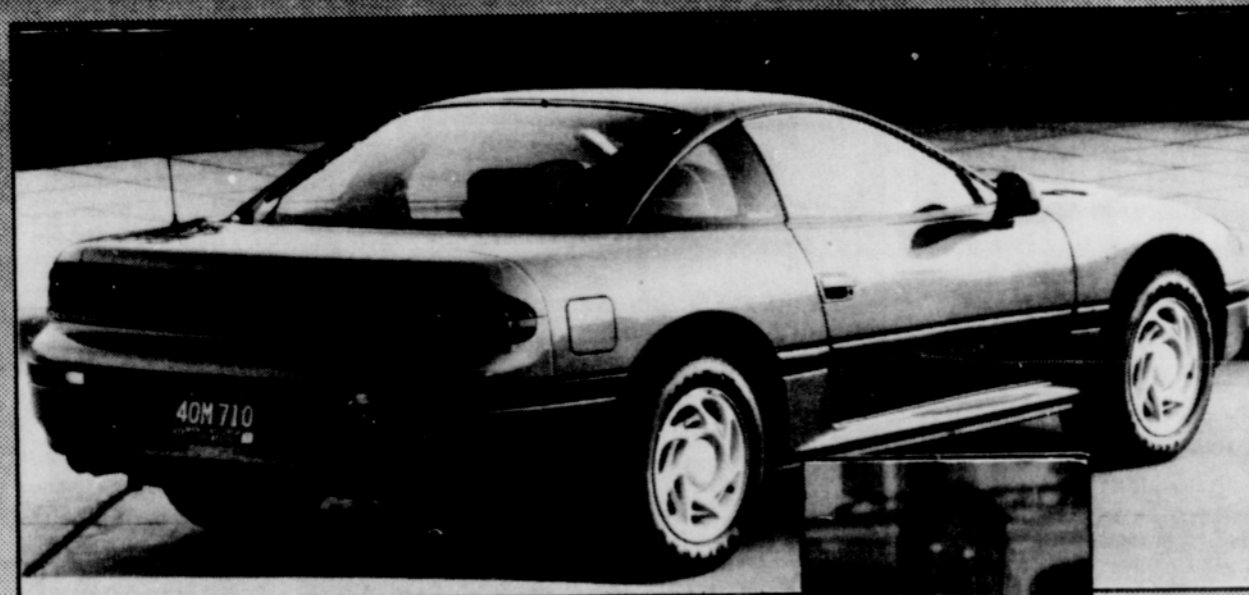

The action was hot and heavy with the finest basketball talent in the region, taking part. The games started at 6:00pm and 8:00pm every day ending with a championship game on Saturday, August 24. Attendance for the week-long event was 2,500. This outstanding event was produced by Entertainment and All. The commissioner of the tournament is Byron Brown, president of Entertainment and All. This was the second year of the Unity Tournament Basketball Classic, at Irving Park basketball complex.

This year's MVP was Tony Hampton, who led the Clippers to victory.

The week of fun ended with a dance downtown at the Neighbors of Woodcraft Hall, where Paul and Geneva Knauls added another trophy to their collection. Let's give a special thanks to Entertainment and All, and those who made it happen.
