Kaiser Permanente Receives "Partners in Change" Award From Four Community College Programs

Today at Portland Community College's Cascade Campus the first annual "Partners in Change" award was given to the northwest region of Kaiser Permanente to honor an outstanding record of support for Portland-area single parent women and displaced homemakers.

Since last fall Kaiser Permanente's Transition Program has provided comprehensive health care in the Portland area for approximately 600 women and children associated with programs which help single parents and displaced homemakers enter the work force. The four programs honoring Kaiser Permanente are Life and Career Options, Clackamas Community College; Women in Transition, Mt. Hood Community College; New Directions, Portland Community College-Rock Creek Campus; and Project Independence, Portland Community College-Cascade Campus.

Displaced homemakers and single parent women are often thrown into the job market, often unexpectedly, when they lose their primary means of support. Most are divorced or widowed. In Oregon, Census Bureau survey statistics show us that there were more than 130,000 displaced homemakers in Oregon in 1989. Single parent women push the statistics much higher.

To help Oregon residents who are medically uninsured, last fall Kaiser Permanente began the Transitions Program. This program extends medical coverage at no cost for up to two years for people with no health insurance who participate in an Oregon Department of Education training and education program. The Transitions Program is for low-income single parents and displaced homemakers -- and their eligible dependents -- who are upgrading skills and education in order to enter the work force and become self-sufficient.

Oregon Department of Education representative Hilda Thompson presented the "Partners in Change" award on behalf of the four community college programs to Kaiser Permanente Health Plan Manager Denise Honzel.

Honzel said Kaiser's Permanente's program is "part of a national effort by Kaiser Permanente to help the medically uninsured and underinsured by offering health care coverage at no or low cost."

"Our program assists people striving to become self-sufficient, productive wage earners. We are very pleased to be able to work with the community colleges in these programs. And because we work with an existing program, administrative costs can be minimized and more people can be covered," she added.

"Because of this special help, my four-year-old daughter Katie was able to get an operation which helped her to hear again," said Women in Transition student Rosalie King, a 35-year old single parent of three children who lives in Gresham. She had constant ear infections and was living in pain. She had tubes implanted in her ears and now is beginning to live a normal life," King said.

Another student, Phyllis Haas, who lives in Boring and has been enrolled in the Life and Career Options program, said she had received a life-saving tracheotomy from Kaiser Permanente doctors. Prior to enrollment in the program, she had had trouble breathing but could not afford the medical care to properly diagnose and remedy the condition.

Dan Saltzman, chair of the Portland Community College Board of directors, hosted the ceremony. Saltzman is an ardent advocate of non-traditional programs which assist women with entering or reentering the work force.
