

Raghib "The Rocket" Ismail, The Toronto Argonauts' Speedster, Is Pepsi-Cola Canada's First Celebrity Representative

Raghib "The Rocket" Ismail, the classy, 22-year-old rookie speedster with the Toronto Argonauts, signed recently to become Pepsi-Cola Canada's first celebrity representative.

A superb athlete who neither drinks nor smokes, Ismail recently finished his first assignment for Pepsi with the making of an anti-drug video, "Champions," for the company's on-going community based anti-drug campaign.

This is the third in the Pepsi Substance Abuse Foundation's series of school assembly videos featuring popular young celebrities who encourage teens to make the right choices regarding the use of drugs and alcohol.

Ismail will also act as Pepsi's representative at many of its anti-drug projects and help to raise funds to support drug and alcohol programs locally and nationally.

"Pepsi" is known for its dynamic partnerships with the celebrities our customers respect and admire, but this is the first exclusively Canadian signing in our history," declared Steve

Davis, Vice President, Sales and Marketing, Pepsi-Cola Canada. "The Rocket is a terrific young man with enormous talent, dedication and commitment to others. That makes him a champion in every sense of the word and a superb ambassador for our corporate fight against drugs in Canada."

Born in Newark, N.J., on Nov. 19, 1969, Ismail attended high school in Wilkes-Barre, PA., where he took his high school to the State track and field championships and in one record season, scored 36 touchdowns in just 10 football games.

His record-setting pace continued during three years at Notre Dame. Last May, Ismail, who is 5 feet, 10 inches tall and weighs 175 pounds, signed a spectacular contract with the Toronto Argonauts making him the second highest-paid football player in North America.

The modest, reflective young athlete signed the contract even before he donned a uniform for his first professional football game.
