Chaka Khan To Be Honored By The I.A.A.A.M.

Hot from the success of both a Billboard number one (#1) Dance Single and an R&R number one (#1) Urban single for "Love You All My Lifetime," Warner Bros. Records recording artist Chaka Khan will be receiving an award from the International Association of African-American Music (I.A.A.A.M.) on June 13th. Ms. Khan will be honored for her years of excellence in the music industry. Her newest album, The Woman I Am, has been receiving rave reviews from music critics alike.

Plans are currently being made for a Chaka Khan summer tour in the United States while her Japanese tour is playing to sold-out audiences.

The I.A.A.A.M. is a non-profit organization created to preserve and promote African-American music.

Four-Star Line-Up Featured In "Siskel & Ebert Talk About The New Black Cinema With Whoopi Goldberg, Spike Lee, John Singleton And Wesley Snipes"

One-Hour Special Addressing media Images Of African-Americans To Air On Station Across The Country June 5-21

In their newest hour-long special "Siskel & Ebert Talk About The New Black Cinema With Whoopi Goldberg, Spike Lee, John Singleton And Wesley Snipes," movie critics Gene Siskel and Roger Ebert address a subject straight out of today's headlines: media images of African Americans.

Whoopi Goldberg, Spike Lee, John Singleton and Wesley Snipes join their hosts for a critical look at where African Americans are in the movies today, as well as what lies ahead. The special will air on stations across the country June 5-21 (check local listings for date and time).

At the fabled Cannes Film Festival, Roger Ebert catches up with actress Whoopi Goldberg and director Spike Lee. An Oscar-winner for "Ghost," Goldberg stars in the soon-to-be released film version of the Broadway hit musical "Sarafina!" which recently took her to South Africa. She is one of the few African American actresses acknowledged as a major box-office star and knows firsthand the difficulty black women have making their mark in Hollywood.

No stranger to controversy, Lee, director of the acclaimed "Do the Right Thing" and "Jungle Fever," is currently editing "Malcolm X," his epic biography of Malcolm X, and one of the first films ever to have a black hero as its central character.

In Los Angeles, Gene Siskel talks to actor Wesley Snipes and director John Singleton. Snipes, star of such films as the recently released "White Men Can't Jump," "New Jack City" and Lee's "Jungle Fever," is one of the fastest-rising African American actors today. Critics and audiences agree that his performances have made him a powerful screen presence.

Singleton, who made his directorial debut with the acclaimed film "Boyz 'N' the Hood," is the first African American to be nominated for a Best Director Oscar as well as the youngest nominee in that category. A native of Los Angeles, he speaks about the recent events on his home turf, offering his perspective on the crisis that captured the world's attention.

All four movie professionals talk about the pressures of being an African American in the film industry, including their frustrations with the system and the sweetness of their triumphs. Together with Siskel and Ebert, the special takes a personal look at the lives of these four entertainers and examines the role of African American's in cinema -- past, present and future.

"Siskel & Ebert" is distributed by Buena Vista Television, which is a subsidiary of The Walt Disney company.

Once in a Lifetime

Today I took a look in the mirror the reflection I see is certainly real - A pretty black girl, living in a world of fear.

I want to be strong - courageous and brave to conquer all the dreams I've ever had.

I want to finish school with a degree, Hoping for a better economy. Get married - raise a family, being the best I can. For this day and age a better future is hard to see.

Stand tall - be positive know your direction in all you do, for it's your life and you know what to do.

Reading, writing and math you can handle. A study plan can help the matter. Don't waste time on endless dreams. Dreams are real take action for only survivors can actually win. They're trials and tribulations I'm sure you will agree, study hard for that degree.

By the end of your troubles, what a wonderful thrill you actually got the results of your dream.
