PGE's Vintage Trolley

After nearly five decades in hiatus, Portland General Electric Co. (PGE) is returning to the railway tracks in vintage style. The former trolley company is "bringing back to life" one of only four old-time trolleys that will be tracing the streets of Portland beginning Wednesday, July 15, from noon to 1 p.m., at Pioneer Courthouse Square.

To mark the occasion, the public will be treated to free ice cream in the square the brass band sounds of Stumptown Jazz and the sweet melodies of Surround Sound, a local barbershop quartet. During the festivities, PGE's Vintage Trolley will make two stops at the square to give people an opportunity to board and get a closer look at the replica. In addition, free passes for future trolley rides will be handed out to the first 1,000 people that show up and a drawing will be held for a gourmet picnic dinner for two to four people and one evening's private use of the PGE trolley.

PGE is one of four Portland organizations sponsoring a Vintage Trolley. Unlike the other three, PGE has added something very special to its car -- energy efficiency. Through the use of compact fluorescent bulbs, the car expends about one-fourth the energy required for lighting. The bulbs also last ten times longer than regular incandescent lights. In addition, the car is equipped with signs and posters that offer helpful energy efficiency tips for riders.

"In supporting the Vintage Trolley, we're reviving a bit of our past and promoting the wise use of our natural resources," says Dick Reiten, President of Portland General Corp. "Aside from the energy efficiency elements we've incorporated in our car, the trolleys are a form of mass transit. Using the PGE vintage trolley, riding MAX, taking the bus or carpooling means fewer cars on the road, and that's good for air quality," he says.

PGE's history with trolleys spans more than eight decades. The company played an integral role supplying electricity for original trolleys in the late 1900s. By 1906 PGE (then known as Portland Railway, Light & Power Co.) owned all city railways and many of the inter-urban lines -- a natural marriage since the electric railways were among the largest power users.

PGE owned and operated 14 parks along the trolley lines including Council Crest, the Oaks (the current site of Oaks Park), and Canemah Park overlooking Willamette Falls. Between 1907 and 1919, the company safely transported more than one billion people on city lines.

The early electric trolleys were also used for freight transportation. Wood, gravel, fruits, vegetables, and dairy products were brought in on the cars from Troutdale, Gresham, Bull Run and other outlying areas.

PGE operated the railway system until 1946 when it was sold to the Portland Transit Company. The last electric trolleys retired from Portland's streets in 1950.

Firm To Publish Black Media Directory

A Rochester Hills, Michigan, publishing firm has announced that it will publish a new and unique directory listing major and new Black media influences this fall. The Grace Company will release the 1993 Premier Edition of Black Authors and Published Writers Directory in October 1992. The directory will be a complete and exclusive listing of Black authors, publishers, distributors, song, film, script and playwrights, producers, agents, editorial sources, consultants, and marketing resources. The directory will also provide a resource listing for anyone interested in services of Black authors and other Black media.

According to Editor Grace Adams, the BA&PW Directory will be distributed on a world-wide basis to the literary marketplace and will be a valuable resource and marketing tool for Black writers seeking to place their work with a publisher, producer or agent. Questionnaires are in the process of being sent to potential listing entrants and must be returned by May 15, 1992. Listings are free and will be alphabetized and categorized under author's name, title of work, and subject matter.

Display advertising space is also available in the directory. Full and half page display ads are being accepted until May 15, 1992 deadline. Display advertisers also receive a free listing in the yellow pages index. There is a charge for companies or individuals who wish to be listed in the industry yellow pages listing only.

For more information about the directory and information on display advertising rates, contact The Grace Company, PO Box 80047, Rochester Hills, MI 48308 or phone 1-800-762-5799.
