PCC Is Excited About Its New Ophthalmic Technology Program. "Ophthalmic Technology?" you say... "What's that?"

O-P-H-T-H-A-L-M-I-C medical technicians assist ophthalmologists with direct eye care. They take medical histories, perform diagnostic tests, administer medications, assist in surgery and in fitting contact lenses.

Ophthalmic Technology is a rapidly growing field offering good salaries for new graduates. The PCC associate of applied science degree program was created to help satisfy a growing demand.

PCC offers one of only two Ophthalmic Technology programs at community colleges nationwide, and the only one on the West Coast.

Space is limited to the first 25 qualifying students.

Financial Aid is available
