FREDDIE JACKSON

Time for Love

While many new names have arrived on the scene recently to compete in the field of R&B balladeers, Freddie Jackson remains at the top of the games with his fifth Capitol release, Time for Love. Now in fine fighting form (he's dropped 40 pounds since his last record and is still losing!), the svelte Mr. Jackson has thrown his hat into the ring with a new single, "I could Use A Little Love Right Now." The record also features a sensuous cover of soul classic "Me and Mrs. Jones," "I Don't What to Live My Life Without You" (a "Capitol" number featuring label mate D'Atra Hicks and produced by Richard Marx), and a hot guest appearance by saxophonist Najee on "All I Ever Ask," produced by industry legend Arif Martin. Hitmaker Barry Eastmond lent his writing, production and musical talents to several tracks as well. Freddie's track record of multi-platinum and gold albums speaks for itself, and this new release should prove once again that he's the one and only champ.
