New Acting Deputy Director Of The Health Standards And Quality Bureau

David C. Clark has been named acting deputy director of the health standards and quality bureau in the federal Health Care Financing Administration, William Toby Jr., acting HCFA administrator, announced today. Clark replaces John Spiegel, who has accepted a position with the Centers for Disease Control.

Clark transferred from HCFA's Philadelphia regional office, where he had been the acting deputy regional administrator since May. Prior to that, he served in Philadelphia for three years as the associate regional administrator for health standards and quality.

"David Clark will bring to HCFA's Medicare and Medicaid programs nationally the same outstanding service he has provided throughout his 12 years of federal service," Toby said. "His dedication to improving health care quality in increasingly important positions led to his current selection."

Clark, a commander in the U.S. Public Health Service's commissioned corps, was assigned in 1987 to HCFA's Chicago regional office as chief of its medical review branch.

Earlier, for seven years, he served in the PHS Chicago regional office, rising to direct the regional National Health Service Corps program, where he recruited and assigned health professionals to inner cities and rural areas.

Before joining the federal government, Clark worked for five years as a hospital pharmacist.

He received a bachelor's degree in pharmacy from the University of Illinois, in Urbana, in 1975, and a master's degree in business administration from the Illinois Institute of Technology, in Chicago, in 1986.

Clark was born in Chicago on Feb. 20, 1953, and graduated from Lindbloom Technical High School in Chicago.

Clark now lives in Baltimore.

He participates in professional organizations, among them the National Pharmaceutical Association and the Commissioned Officers Association.

The health standards and quality bureau ensures the quality of care for Medicare and Medicaid beneficiaries through a survey and certification program, and the review of medical services received by patients.

Roosevelt Pulls Off Upset

BY JOHN PHILLIPS

Isaac Lagrone's 30-yard touchdown run in the fourth quarter, and the all-important two-point conversion, led the Roosevelt Roughriders to victory over the unbeaten Minutemen from Marshall, 14-13. It was Roosevelt's first win in 21 games over a three-year period; but none sweeter than this one!

Coming into the game, Marshall was 3-0 and Roosevelt 0-3. So it was safe to say and assume that Marshall would be victorious over the basement dwellers, the Roughriders. But first year coach Jim MacDicken had improved Roosevelt week by surprise, and that someone happen to be unbeaten Marshall.

This will not be Roosevelt's last win of the season. Look for the Roughriders to improve with each game they play.

Congratulations, Roosevelt! Way to go!

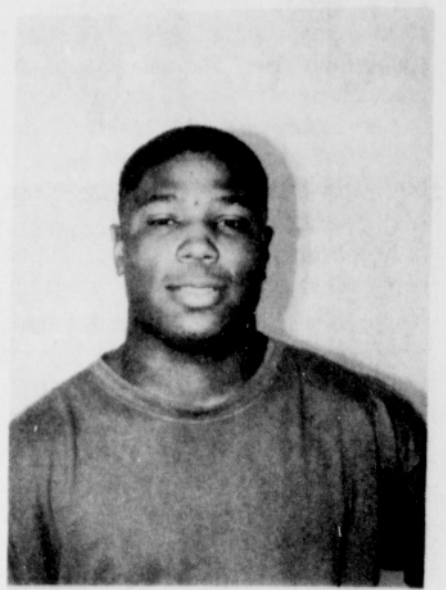

Other PIL Action

In other PIL rumbles on Friday, Wilson had an easy time with Benson, winning 33-13. The game was highlighted by the 82-yard kickoff return by Wilson's James Ward.

Jefferson just got by Grant 12-8, as Hakeem McCallister scored two touchdowns for Jefferson.

Madison beat Franklin 21-8, and Lincoln edged Cleveland by the score of 24-22.

Observer Player Of The Week

BY JOHN PHILLIPS

This week's Portland Observer Player of the Week is Isaac Lagrone of Roosevelt High School.

Lagrone led the Roughriders to a 14-13 upset win over Marshall. It was the first win for Roosevelt in over two years.

Lagrone scored on a 30 yard run, and ran in the two-point conversion, which was the difference in the game. He ran for 55 yards on 15 carries. But Coach Jim MacDicken pointed out that it was Lagrone's blocking in this game that was the key.

So for an outstanding effort, we at The Portland Observer take our hats off to Player of the Week, Mr. Isaac Lagrone!

Oregon Field Guide's Season Opener Takes Viewers Underground

Restoring subterranean sculptures of the Oregon Caves, recording the songs of the crane for science, and passing on Native American traditions to a new generation open the new season of Oregon Field Guide.

Beginning its fourth season on Thursday, October 8, at 8:30p.m., Oregon Field Guide, and host Steve Amen continue to bring the state's natural beauty and fascinating people to the viewers of Oregon Public Broadcasting television.

In 1874, Elijah Davidson followed his dog into a mosscovered hole in pursuit of a bear. What he discovered was a beautiful marble cavern known today as the Oregon Caves. Follow Oregon Field Guide's camera into this wonderland, where, after millions of visitors, workers are restoring the caves to a more natural state.

Then, meet Geoff Keller, whose hobby--recording bird songs--not only brings him great enjoyment, but makes a major contribution to science. Oregon Field Guide shows how Keller's recordings are helping biologists to identify birds and manage their populations more effectively.

And finally, Oregon Field Guide introduces viewers to a family with a real sense of tradition, tradition the elders of this Native American family hope to pass on to their children.

Oregon Field Guide repeats Sundays at 5:30p.m. on OPB-TV, KOAN-TV 3 Bend, KOAC-TV 7 Corvallis, KOPB-TV 10 Portland, KTVR-TV 13, La Grande, and KEPB-TV 28 Eugene.

Oregon Superintendent of public Instruction Norma Paulus and Employment Division Administrator Pamela Mattson will conduct a ribbon cutting ceremony next week to dedicate the division's first child-friendly waiting room. The waiting room is designed to support customers in their dual roles as workers and parents, and also serve as an educational tool for introducing children to the world of work.

The waiting room was developed by the Department of Education at the request of the Employment Division, as an investment in Oregon's future workforce and in honor of Children's Week. This project is in step with the education reform act, which aims at producing the best trained and educated workforce in the world by the year 2010.

Free Teacher's Workshop To Be Hosted In Portland

Historically, it's nothing new--teachers have always done it. What is it they do? Spend money--not on themselves, but to benefit their students. Indeed, in 1990, a survey by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching found that 96% of America's teachers annually spend an average of $250 of their own money on school-related items ranging from textbooks to computer software to professional enrichment activities. Portland-area teachers, however, won't have to spend a penny to attend the upcoming Borrowed Time workshop hosted by Environmental Education Associates (EEA).

Borrowed time, a recycling and waste management education workshop, is coming to Portland on Friday, October 9--Portland's Inservice Day. This workshop prepares educators to enhance the environmental awareness of today's students by providing them with specialized waste management instruction and easy-to-use classroom materials. Borrowed Time helps teachers--and their students--conserve natural resources and promote a healthy environment by learning how to reduce, reuse and recycle their garbage!

As Portland city planners strive to develop and implement successful waste management strategies--including source reduction, recycling and composting programs--teachers will play an increasingly crucial role in public education. What is learned in the Borrowed Time workshop will become relevant to every Portland citizen.

The Borrowed Time workshop is particularly useful to science, environmental and home economics educators working with students in grades 6-12. Registration for the workshop is free and includes the complementary Borrowed Time curriculum kit, all collateral materials and lunch. The workshop will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. at Fernwood Middle School on 915 N.E. 33rd Street in Portland.

Borrowed Time is an independent program of Environmental Education Associates, Inc., a Washington, D.C.-based environmental services firm. The Portland workshop will be sponsored by the Partnership for Plastics Progress. For more information, or to register to attend this special workshop, educators should call EEA at (202) 296-4572. (Collect calls from educators will be accepted.)
