New Child Support Enforcement Law-Step In The Right Direction

A new federal law provides prison terms and substantial fines to penalize a non-custodial parent for interstate flight to avoid paying child support. The threat of jail is expected to spur timely payments.

Senator Herb Kohl of Wisconsin, a principal author of the legislation, says "it's time to stop letting non-custodial parents who deliberately ignore their children's financial needs to get away with neglect."

Nevertheless, single parents seeking help with their child support orders often have to work with distant enforcement authorities, a frequently lengthy and frustrating process. Millions of children are the real victims.

Compounding the problem, new non-governmental "support enforcement" services are now running television advertising without revealing that fees of 30 percent or more of resulting collections will be charged. A typical service locks a parent into a year-long, non-cancelable, exclusive agency agreement.

To learn more about this critical issue, there's a new "Guide to Child Support Enforcement" with answers to more than 50 key questions designed to help track down a runaway parent, gain and enforce court support orders, and deal out-of-state as well as overseas. Available from Reymont Associates, P.O. Box 114-C, New York, NY 10276; $3.95, postage paid.

Inaugural Plates May Cause Confusion

Presidential Inaugural license plates are now available for purchase by the public, but DMV reminds drivers the special plates can't replace their regular plates.

"Presidential Inaugural plates may be displayed in addition to-- not instead of--regular registration plates issued by various states, including Oregon," said Joanne Peterson of DMV Title and Registration. "Some people might purchase the inaugural plates and think it's okay to use them instead of their regular plates. We're reminding motorists now, so they don't encounter problems later."

Inquiries regarding the issuance of Presidential Inaugural plates should be directed to: Presidential Inaugural Marketing Department, Southeast Federal Center, Building 159, 4th and M Streets, S.E. Washington, D.C. 20599.

The U.S. Department Of Labor

In 1990, wage and salary workers with 4 years of high school had median earnings of $354 a week, and those with 1-3 years of college earned $431. By comparison those with 4 years of college earned $569, and workers with 5 or more years, $704, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics' Occupational Outlook Quarterly.

In 1986, only 33 percent of high school graduates from the class of 1972 reported that they participated in employer-sponsored training on their last full-time job, compared to 60 percent of those who went on to finish college. Employer-sponsored training often leads to better paying jobs, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics' Occupational Outlook Quarterly.

Graduates with bachelor's degrees in economics, engineering, mathematics, and business had the highest earnings, and graduates in home economics, education, English/journalism, and liberal arts had the lowest, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics' Occupational Outlook Quarterly.

Martin Luther King
1929-1968

"I have a dream that one day the nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed...all men are created equal."

"Our needs are identical with labor's needs: decent wages, fair working conditions, livable housing, old age security, health and welfare measures, conditions in which families can grow..."
